<td>Cynthia Chalupa began her career as Assistant Director of Ohio’s Collaborative Articulation and Assessment Program, through which she worked with high-school teachers to develop a seamless transition between secondary and post-secondary language programs. Since 2001, she has worked at WVU, where she teaches all levels of language and culture as well as foreign language methods, acts as an advisor to undergraduate and graduate students, and trains both teacher candidates and Graduate Teaching Associates. Assessment work has been a continuous thread throughout Dr. Chalupa’s career. She has served on the College Board AP Language Commission, on the advisory board for the ACTFL/ETS Praxis II Exam, and as a member of the ACTFL/DLI Standards Setting Commission. She has written items for the ETS PRAXIS II exam and is a certified ACTFL OPI interviewer. She has been a member of the AATG National German Exam Advisory Board for five years, the last two of which as co-chair. She is currently a member of the AP German Language and Culture Development Committee and spearheads the assessment projects of WVU’s World Languages Department. She is an AATG TraINdAf fellow (class of 2003) and has served as President, Vice-President, and Awards and Testing Chair of the West Virginia-AATG. Dr. Chalupa has published on literature and culture as well as world language pedagogy. Her publications include articles on Rilke, Trakl, ETA Hoffmann, mountaineering and German identity, international TA training, assessment development, and the link between motivations and autonomous learning choices. She has co-authored a teacher’s handbook on the use of live television programming in the classroom and Neue Blickwinkel, an intermediate textbook, now in its second edition. She has presented at a wide variety of regional, national, and international conferences, including ACTFL, CSCCTFL, NECTFL, GSA, NEMLA, KFLC, among others. Based on her love of teaching, Dr. Chalupa has taken students to Germany on a study abroad program for the past twelve years and established internships for students to allow them to experience professional life abroad. Based on her love of teaching and dedication to it, she has been honored with two Outstanding Teacher awards at WVU.</td>

<td>Catherine Ritz is the Director of Modern Foreign Language Education and a Clinical Assistant Professor at the Boston University School of Education. A National Board Certified Teacher, she began teaching almost 15 years ago as a high school French and Spanish teacher and has since taught every level from 6th grade to AP French. Catherine was most recently the Director of World Languages in Arlington Public Schools (MA), where she developed advanced cinema courses in French and Spanish, launched national world language honor societies, and piloted the Seal of Biliteracy. Under Catherine’s leadership, Arlington P.S. was the recipient of the AATF Outstanding French Program Award with Honors in 2016. Catherine also oversaw the growth and development of the Mandarin language program in Arlington. A strong believer in multilingualism, Catherine sought grants from the Centro Attività Scolastiche Italiane to reinstate the Italian language program in Arlington in 2013, and was also awarded a number of other small grants, providing funding for professional development, technology integration, vertical alignment, and training in differentiated instruction. Catherine has served on the executive board for the AATF Eastern MA chapter, and joined the board of directors for the Massachusetts Foreign Language Association (MaFLA) in 2012. In her service to MaFLA, Catherine was the conference chair (2014), president in (2015–2016), and now serves as the MaFLA programming coordinator. Seeing a need for a more focused and collaborative form of professional development in her state, Catherine developed the MaFLA Proficiency Academy. This 4-day, teacher-centered, hands-on event has brought in top presenters and has helped spread proficiency-based teaching across the state. A regular presenter herself, Catherine has led sessions and workshops at AATF, ACTFL, MaFLA, NHAWLT, and FLENJ (upcoming), and a webinar for NNELL. Catherine holds a B.S. from Boston University, an M.A. in TESOL/Foreign Language Education from New York University, an A.L.M. in Foreign Language Literature &amp; Culture from Harvard University, and an Ed.D. in Curriculum &amp; Instruction from Texas A&amp;M University.</td>

<td>James Wildman is the head teacher for the Glastonbury Public Schools’ Foreign Language Department in Connecticut. He is in his twelfth-year teaching Spanish at Glastonbury High School, where he has taught Spanish 1-6. James holds both a Bachelors from the University of Connecticut in Spanish Education, and a Masters in Curriculum and Instruction, along with a Masters in Educational Leadership from Sacred Heart University. He has served as an advisor to the classes of 2013, 2014 and 2019, along with the school district’s Foreign Language Honor Societies, Model UN, and Be the Key, a $100,000 winner of State Farm Insurance’s “Celebrate My Drive” safe teen driving contest. He also coordinates the district’s two Spanish Exchange programs, giving an average of 30 students per year the opportunity to both host and travel abroad to Spain, to use the skills they learn in their Spanish classes each day. James has also served for eleven years as the program director for the Glastonbury Public Schools’ Discover Chinese and Discover Russian STARTALK Programs, managing two grants for the Department of Defense’s critical language capacity-building programs. He has served on the board of directors for the Connecticut Council of Language Teachers (CT COLT), where he currently serves as president. During the spring of 2017 legislative session, he worked with a diverse group of legislators and educators to help pass the Seal of Biliteracy, which will be offered to students beginning with the graduating class of 2018. James has served on two ACTFL award committees for the ACTFL Leo Benardo Award for Innovation in K-12 Language Education and the ACTFL Award for Excellence in Foreign Language Instruction Using Technology with IALLT (K-12). He is a regular presenter at state, local and national conferences on a wide variety of topics, including student engagement, technology in the world language classroom, and assessment and grading. He is the recipient of the CT COLT Pegasus Pride Award and the 2015 Distinguished Service Award for outstanding contributions to the world language field.</td>

A Message from the 2018 Chair

Dear Friends,

On behalf of the Board of Directors and Executive Director, John Carlino, I’m honored to welcome you to the 64th Northeast Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages in the heart of Midtown Manhattan. From fourteen states and the District of Columbia we gather to celebrate our common passion for languages and cultures and our common calling to share the gift of language proficiency and intercultural competence. It is our hope that these will be days of learning, sharing, collaboration, empowerment and inspiration.

The theme for this year’s conference emerged from the desire to elevate, celebrate and honor the teaching profession and to focus on the process of developing language proficiency. In selecting the theme, Unleashing the POWER of Proficiency, we invite world language educators to tap into their inner superhero and understand their language proficiency, pedagogical expertise, intercultural experiences and interpersonal skills as the superpowers that they are. Not only do we use our superpowers for good, but our real strength is rooted in our desire to pass on these superpowers to others. In doing so, we promote universal values of respect, diversity, empathy, tolerance and peace and help learners experience the joy that language proficiency and the adventure that discovering other cultures can bring.

We are pleased to welcome Dr. Eileen Glisan, co-author of the groundbreaking Teacher’s Handbook, as our keynote speaker. In articulating the ACTFL Core Practices, Dr. Glisan gives us a framework by which we can understand our professional practice and a lens through which we can examine and interpret many of the other topics that will be considered in workshops, sessions, roundtables and labs throughout the conference.

Each of the ten conference sessions will include a featured presentation, selected and recognized for its direct relevance to elaborating the conference theme. In addition, you’ll find “Best of” sessions selected to represent many of our state conferences, along with sessions reporting on projects done by recipients of the NECTFL Mead Fellowship. I also invite you to spend some time checking out the latest instructional resources assembled in our exhibit hall, brought to us by our many vendors, whose participation supports the cost of the conference. Feel free to share your discoveries with colleagues through social media using the hashtag #nectfl18.

Thank you for choosing the Northeast Conference to be part of your personal professional development plan this year. It is our sincerest wish that this conference helps you grow in your professional practice and inspires you to continue to use your superpowers for good.

Sincerely,

Bill Heller

1. Can-Do Learning: Developing Communication with Language and Culture ($100)
9:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m. (6 h.) Regent

What do learners need to demonstrate consistently over time to show that they can use language for Interpersonal, Interpretive, and Presentational Communication? What are the indicators of increasing Intercultural Communication? Unwrap the revised NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements and the new Can-Do Statements for Intercultural Communication to create the blueprint for effective language learning. Apply the Can-Do Statements to identify effective instructional strategies, create effective unit and lesson designs, and plan formative and summative assessments.

Organizer/Presenters(s):
Jessica Haxhi,
New Haven Public Schools, New Haven, CT

Intended Audience(s): PreK-16+ (all)

Keyword: Curriculum

Examples in: Several

Language(s) spoken: English

2. Leveling Up: Unleash Your Students’ Growth in Proficiency
Cancelled
Sutton South

Help your learners level up! Aiming for higher proficiency is key to growth, but how do we help students reach higher levels of functional ability? Too often, students stick at a given proficiency level, preferring to stay with the safe and easy. By focusing on students’ abilities, plus what they will need to perform at the next level, teachers and learners can bridge that gap. This interactive workshop offers concrete strategies to get students unstuck. Learn to build this target-and-support strategy into your curriculum, then brainstorm and develop a wide variety of techniques that move students up the proficiency scale, including scaffolded activities, challenges and incentives, directive feedback, and explicit proficiency targets.

Organizer/Presenters(s):
Charlotte Gifford,
Greenfield Community College, MA

Intended Audience(s): High School & College

Keyword: Instructional strategies

Examples in: French, Spanish

Language(s) spoken: English

3. Picture It! Analyzing Art to Move Up the Proficiency Scale ($100)
9:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m. (6 h.)
Begin in Madison, then off-site/MoMA

After discussing theoretical approaches, participants will develop strategies for integrating art into daily instruction. By sampling successful activities for K-16+ learners, participants will understand how to connect culture to target language instruction, discuss how to measure student performance in Interpersonal Communication and Presentational Speaking, and write assessments to monitor student progress. From here we will walk to MoMA, where participants will have the opportunity to integrate the products, practices and perspectives of their target language and culture into lessons that they develop. Finally we will reconvene as a group to share our approaches.

Organizer/Presenters(s):
Kathy Fegely,
Antietam School District, Reading, PA

4. What Else Can I Do With Can-Dos? ($50)
9:30 a.m.–12:30 p.m. (3 h.) Sutton North

Can-Do statements, learning goals, functions, and proficiency targets: How do all these things fit together in the design and development of a proficiency-focused learning plan? This workshop explores how linking functions, skills, and content can result in unit performance assessments that chart a path to language proficiency growth. Participants will collaborate in a variety of activities to uncover the connections between these components and harness the power that they bring to instruction and assessment.

5. Creating Confidence Through Comprehensible Input for the Classics Classroom ($50)
9:30 a.m.–12:30 p.m. (3 h.) Sutton Center

This workshop will explore the use of comprehensible input in the Latin classroom. The presenters, three teachers who have switched to using comprehensible input in their classes, have increased their students' proficiency with this method. All three have found that their students have increased in their proficiency in Latin and ancient Greek, in both their vocabulary acquisition and in their confidence with the language. The presenters will review how to create comprehensible input for students, how to implement this instructional strategy, and what assessments and activities have worked well for them using comprehensible input. Participants will leave with examples of how to transform their teaching through the use of comprehensible input-gear activities and instructional techniques, and will have a better understanding of why comprehensible input is important and valuable in the Latin and ancient Greek classroom.

<td>Creating High-Impact Chinese Instructional Activities Through ACTFL Core Practices ($50)</td>
<td>Dali Tan, Ph.D., CLASS Yu Lan Lin, Ph.D. CLASS Baocai Jia, CLASS Lucy Lee, Ed.S., CLASS Carol Chen Lin, Ph.D., CLASS</td>
<td>More and more Chinese teachers are seeking high-impact instructional practices to advance their students along the proficiency continuum. ACTFL Core Practices provide them with highly efficient and effective tools in achieving such goals. This workshop will start with the description of the Core Practices. The presenters will then use classroom examples to show what these core practices look like when implemented in various proficiency level classes. Participants will also gain experience through hands-on activities focusing on one of the core practices of their choice. This can be used as a foundation for building high-impact instructional activities that will be ready to put into practice.</td>

<td>7.</td>
<td>Doorways to Teaching for Proficiency With Comprehensible Input ($50)</td>
<td>Anny Ewing, Altamira Language Learning, Chester Springs, PA Lori Belinsky, Garnet Valley Middle School, Glen Mills, PA Leslie Kronemeyer, Mainland Regional High School, Linwood, NJ</td>
<td>We will review four key principles of teaching for acquisition with comprehensible input (CI). We'll then do a demo of MovieTalk and PictureTalk in French, Spanish, or English, engaging participants around the story at various levels. To debrief, we'll ask how the activity conforms to CI principles, how it develops and exercises basic skills for delivering comprehensible input, how it leads to fluency-building in our students, and to what degree it aligns with core practices. Participants will then have the opportunity to work in groups by language and level to create their own MovieTalk activity from a selection of short video clips. Everyone will leave with access to resources for building their own MovieTalk/PictureTalk lessons, an exposure to key skills for delivering comprehensible input around those resources, and an understanding of where such activities fit in their proficiency-based curriculum.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.</td>
<td>Reading, Writing and Rigor in the World Language Classroom ($50)</td>
<td>Jennifer Fuenzalida, Fox Lane Middle School, Bedford, NY</td>
<td>Teachers attending this workshop will acquire a number of new strategies for incorporating reading and writing into their daily lessons with a focus on rigor and the goal of increasing student use of the target language. Strategies shared will include using short stories, listening comprehension activities, and reading strategies to increase comprehensible input, and therefore student output, while improving the quantity and quality of writing and speaking. Ways to increase student confidence and engagement in using the target language will be of special focus. Participants will leave inspired and prepared to increase their students’ use of the target language by incorporating reading and writing into their lessons on a more frequent basis. While this presentation is geared toward middle school or beginner-language teachers, any world language teacher would benefit from this presentation.</td>

<td>Laura Sexton, Gaston Early College High School, Dallas, NC</td>
<td>Get hands-on practice designing a Project-Based Learning unit that fits your curriculum, your schedule, and your students. See examples of effective projects from Level I and Level II. Comprehensive project planning will begin with powerful question design and include routines and assessments that engage all three modes of communication, incorporate comprehensible input, meet district and department expectations, and also scaffold a meaningful real-world experience that engages and inspires your students.</td>

10.  Stamping Students’ Passports to Proficiency Using AP Themes ($50)
1:30–4:30 p.m. (3 h.)  Sutton North

Are you worried about how your world language curriculum supports student growth and fosters proficiency? Well, if you’re one of thousands of AP schools, the AP Global Themes hold the key to moving students along the proficiency continuum. Even without an AP course, the AP themes present a ready-made road map of authentic contexts for true depth of knowledge. In this workshop, attendees will discover how to use themes to inspire units, craft essential questions, spiral vocabulary and create authentic performance tasks that will not only engage students, but help make language programs come alive. Leave with a preliminary set of thematic unit plans, essential questions, and assessment ideas across language levels, modeled on backwards design principles.

11.  Get Inside Their Heads! How Neuroscience Research Impacts the Classroom ($50)
1:30–4:30 p.m. (3 h.)  Sutton Center

Class time is priceless, so learn how to effectively design the classroom experience to get the most out of your students. Learn from an educator who specializes in brain research and from a 25-year master language teacher on how research can inform pedagogy, ultimately transforming your classroom. This interactive workshop will cover the effective creation of long-term memories and the retrieval and successful use of knowledge across modalities of the target language. By focusing on the most recent brain research and the ACTFL core practices, participants will redesign a lesson through the lens of current neuroscience research, leaving with the tools and knowledge necessary to apply this research to the teaching and learning of language.

12.  Developing Proficiency and Cross-Cultural Understanding Using French News Videos ($50)
1:30–4:30 p.m. (3 h.)  Beekman

This highly interactive, three-hour workshop will include: review and discussion of standards and design principles; examples of the facilitators’ current practice; hands-on experience using software tools; and collaborative work in small groups to create activities or lesson plans based on news videos in French. The collaborative part of the workshop will end with a debrief, where the groups will present their activities or lessons and receive feedback. We will then suggest ways to “spiral” news reports, combined with other authentic materials, to generate a range of activities that engage students, help them develop insight into the target culture, promote critical thinking and offer ample language practice across different modes. The major goal is for each of the participants to leave the workshop armed with a clear pedagogical framework that they can use to build lessons targeted to their own teaching needs, along with a few concrete and specific ideas about how to use French news videos.

13.  Time to Create! ($50)
1:30–4:30 p.m. (3 h.)  Bryant

Did you ever leave a conference with tons of great ideas, but then get back to school only to deal with the aftermath of 3 sub days and never find time to implement or integrate everything you learned? Well, this workshop is for you! In these three hours, we will produce those materials that you’ve wanted, but have not found the time to make. Using many free applications like Kahoot, Quizlet, Explain Everything, PowerPoint, Pic Kids, Telegammi, Voki, Haiku Deck, Story Kit, Puppet Pals, etc., we will walk you through the process. You will need a Chromebook, laptop and/or iPad, and internet/data. Please note that free WiFi is not provided.

14.  From Performance to Proficiency: Designing Assessments in the Three Modes ($50)
1:30–4:30 p.m. (3 h.)  Nassau East

How can we design tasks using the three modes of communication to move students beyond class performance to higher proficiency? Students often use predictable or forced choice items, maintaining learning patterns that are intolerant of ambiguity, inflexible, and risk-averse. These are conditions that hinder proficiency goals. In this workshop, the presenter will guide participants in task design to solve problems and create products of value beyond the classroom. We will develop specific Can-Do targets that align with the assessment task. Participants leave with templates and implementation tools to continue design work in their schools or for turn-key training of new teachers. This workshop is hands-on and interactive with presentation, examples, and discussion.

15. Power Talk: Strategies for Increasing Proficiency ($50)
1:30–4:30 p.m. (3 h.) Nassau West

Do you want to get your students talking and engaged in meaningful dialogue? Do you want to be able to scaffold to propel proficiency upward? Come learn how to not only lay the groundwork for a strong interpersonal foundation but also empower your students to advance their proficiency. Learn activities that provide various ways for students to practice at each proficiency level while addressing various learning styles and meeting the needs of all learners. Learn how to design an effective interpersonal prompt, and design some that you can use immediately.

Eating out?

Meals are not provided with the hotel room rate or conference registration fees. Each day’s schedule has an hour and a half break built in mid-day for lunch and exhibit viewing.

Being in Manhattan, there are countless options. In the hotel lobby you’ll find Herb N’ Kitchen for a quick coffee or snack. Directly across the street on West 53rd is Café 53, a well-stocked buffet/cafeteria-style eatery with something for everyone at reasonable prices. If you walk out the front door, you’ll see the Halal Guys stand on the corner of 53rd and 6th. There’s also a Starbucks across the street on 6th Avenue, Klein and Co. on 6th Ave between 55th and 56th, and a Chipotle at 6th Ave. and 56th. You might also check with the hotel concierge or your favorite app like Yelp or Open Table to help you find something close by. Bon appétit!

Thursday, February 8, Pre-conference Workshops, 1:30–4:30 p.m.
The following sessions have been specially recognized by the Program Committee for their strong connection to the theme: Unleashing the POWer of Proficiency. All featured sessions are scheduled in Sutton North, with one per session time slot.

100. Embrace the POWer of Core Practices to Teach for Proficiency

Session: 1  Sutton North

Embrace the POWer of teaching for proficiency through the Core Practices. Come to this session to unpack and deconstruct high-leverage teaching practices, or Core Practices. The presentation will include modeling and student clips of the Core Practices in the classroom and provide resources to build lessons and units using the research-based Core Practices. Educators will receive resources and specific strategies that transform learning and lead to language acquisition. This interactive session will provide resources for using the Core Practices to support all three modes of communication, and the opportunity to discuss how to tap into the power of these high-leverage teaching practices to build proficiency with students.

Organizer/Presenters:
Lea Graner Kennedy, Stonington Public Schools, Stonington, CT

Intended Audience(s): PreK-12

Keyword: Instructional strategies

Examples in: Spanish, French

Language(s) spoken: English

133. High Leverage Teaching Practices for Powerful Language Learning

Session: 3  Sutton North

High-leverage teaching practices, based on research across all disciplines, provide a lens for novice and experienced educators to examine their own practice. These practices are more than slogans like “use 90%+ target language.” Unwrap and analyze effective teaching strategies that facilitate target-language comprehensibility, develop interpersonal pair and group conversation skills, and guide the interpretation and analysis of authentic texts. Build a stronger repertoire of effective practices and reflect on how to implement these practices in the classroom.

136. Want Your Students to Be Better Speakers? Set Proficiency Targets!

Session: 2  Sutton North

More than anything else, students hope to learn how to speak a language because of the time they have invested in world language courses. Sadly, not many students manage that. But more and more schools are realizing that if we set proficiency targets for each year of learning, students can move toward higher proficiency levels faster and, simultaneously, develop the desire to continue language learning even after requirements are met. This session will examine four principles of proficiency that help learners — and teachers — reach the goal of happier and more proficient speakers. Particular attention will be paid to what the different levels of proficiency look like and how one goes about producing language of that level.

Organizer/Presenters:
Greg Duncan, InterPrep, Marietta, GA

Intended Audience(s): Secondary (6-12)

Keyword: Curriculum

Examples in: English

Language(s) spoken: English

165. Building Proficiency Through Targeted Student Learning Objectives

Session: 5  Sutton North

Participants will learn how designing purposeful Student Learning Objectives (SLOs) with intentional action plans helps teachers to provide students opportunities for performance-based evidence that leads toward proficiency. SLOs that identify proficiency-oriented learning targets, student evidence, and data on student growth will be shared.

Organizer/Presenters:
Rita Oleksak, Glastonbury Public Schools, CT
Megan Villanueva, Glastonbury Public Schools, CT

149. Accommodating Without Compromising: Developing and Measuring Proficiency in Diverse Learners

Session: 4  Sutton North

In this session we will discuss adapting existing materials and strategies through the lens of the proficiency mindset and ACTFL core practices in order to accommodate diverse learners. We will share and develop strategies to satisfy and surpass the requirements in IEPs/504s, increase effectiveness, and raise student confidence without compromising the quality of instruction. A sample unit on internet safety and digital citizenship will be presented and attendees will collaborate to adapt the unit for their classes. The sample unit includes multiple avenues for assessment to allow students to demonstrate proficiency in an authentic context.

<td>The Station Rotation model will teach you engaging ways to keep all students challenged and focused on the three modes of communication while actively problem-solving! It will challenge and motivate students at all proficiency levels, maximize class time, and teach them to monitor their own progress. In this presentation we will use some Google tools to facilitate the presentation. We will use Google Slides (visuals) and Google Forms for immediate feedback on presentation, embedded videos or images, and graphic organizers.</td>
<td>This interactive session will include a variety of communicative activities to engage every type of language-learner. Learn how to use basic cooperative learning structures, kinesthetic activities, and technology to reach all of your language students at all levels. All participants will experience each activity firsthand. The cooperative learning structures being presented will be Quiz Quiz Trade, RoundRobin, and RallyTable, whereas the technology tools will be Kahoot!, Quizlet, and EdPuzzle. Lastly, the kinesthetic activities will include brain breaks in the target language and movement-based activities to teach language. Participants will learn numerous ways to use movement, cooperative learning and technology in the language classroom. Time will be given after each topic to ask questions and to discuss ways to tweak the activities for their own students. The session and the examples will be in Spanish.</td>

<td>This session aims to give insight into a proficiency-based classroom, where performance based assessments and real world tasks are at the forefront of student learning. Here, you will learn about the journey of two teachers who decided to create this curriculum for the first time. We will share all of our successes and challenges, as well as our favorite units and strategies. No matter where you are on your &quot;teach for proficiency&quot; journey, we will give you ideas that can be implemented the next day to help your students on their own road to proficiency!</td>
<td>If the secret to developing real estate is &quot;location, location, location,&quot; then the secret to developing the most useful world language vocabulary is &quot;context, context, context.&quot; Achieving linguistic proficiency stems from awareness that vocabulary is a tool; its application and acquisition are skills which students can — and should — practice with confidence. Students must learn to build their own lexicons by using authentic sources to use context for meaning, by making their own lists of needed terms, and by maneuvering around the words they don’t know. Participants will engage in sample exercises and leave with a set of tried-and-tested activities that they can use on Monday to empower their students and increase proficiency!</td>
<td>During this session we will unleash the power of proficiency through the lens of authenticity. What role does &quot;keeping it real&quot; play in motivating students and helping students move along the proficiency continuum? What proficiency targets have you set for your students? How do those targets impact the tasks students are asked to complete? The presenter will share several authentic interpretive, interpersonal, and presentational tasks aligned to specific proficiency targets.</td>

Friday, February 9, Session 1, 8:30–9:30 a.m.
112. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Tomorrow’s Technology Today: Interactive Tools for 21st Century Digital Learners!

Session: 1
Gibson

Global Literacy? Virtual Reality? 21st Century Skills? Are these some of the buzzwords flying around your department or district? Are you looking for new ways to motivate and engage your students? Join Houghton Mifflin Harcourt as we demonstrate a variety of new and exciting online, interactive, and 3-D tools available to enhance your instruction and reach your next generation learners. Participants will learn about HMH's News and Networking, an online global community for students of Spanish and French; HMHfyi, a new website offering authentic resources; as well as the new Authentic Spanish Video Resources and Activities for Open-Source Content. Session participants will also learn how to take students on virtual field trips with 3-D, 360-degree panoramas of fascinating locations, directly tied to ¡Avancemos! and Bien dit!® content. Computers and tablets encouraged! All participants will receive temporary access to immediately use with students. (WiFi access in the Hilton is not free. Attendees are encouraged to bring their own data plan.)

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Colleen McMahon, Houghton Mifflin Harcourt

Intended Audience(s): Secondary (6-12)

Keyword: Technology

113. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Promoting Student and Teacher Success Through AATSP: Opportunities and Resources

Session: 1
Clinton

This session will highlight the numerous AATSP student activities, such as national examinations, honor societies, student publications, and poster contests, that help educators promote the study of Spanish and Portuguese and strengthen their programs. The presenters will also provide information about AATSP opportunities for professional development, such as the annual conference, scholarships for study-abroad, and travel stipends to attend the annual conference or conduct research. Attendees are eligible to participate in a drawing for free AATSP memberships.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Sheri Spaine Long, Ph.D., AATSP

Intended Audience(s): PreK-16+ (all)

Keyword: Professional development

Examples in: Spanish, Portuguese

Language(s) spoken: English

114. Mead Leadership Collaborative

Session: 1
Madison

This is a closed session for current and former Mead Leadership Fellows, NECTFL board members, and Mead mentors. During this session, the current Mead winners will have the opportunity to share overviews of their projects and collaborate with mentors and former Mead winners to strengthen their plans and make connections that will help facilitate their projects.

Organizer/Presenter(s):

115. Activating the ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines in AFL Instruction and Curriculum

Session: 1
Concourse F

This panel (session) supports the importance of communicating ACTFL language proficiency guidelines to learners of Arabic as a foreign language (AFL). It consists of four presentations. Each presentation addresses how to perceive ACTFL guidelines in relation to curriculum design, rubric for assessment, developing students' aural-oral skills, and filling in some gaps in assigned textbooks.

116. Best of CT: Using Art as the Palette
Session 2
Sutton North

More than anything else, students hope to learn how to speak a language because of the time they have invested in world language courses. Sadly, not many students manage that. But more and more schools are realizing that if we set proficiency targets for each year of learning, students can move toward higher proficiency levels faster and, simultaneously, develop the desire to continue language learning even after requirements are met. This session will examine four principles of proficiency that help learners — and teachers — reach the goal of happier and more proficient speakers. Particular attention will be paid to what the different levels of proficiency look like and how one goes about producing language of that level.

117. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Digital Materials Increase Global Competency in World Languages
Session 2
Sutton South

The goal of this workshop is to offer an artistic spin on the teaching of a World Language curriculum. Please join us for an interactive, high energy, CREATIVE workshop that will use art as the vehicle for language learning. This workshop will inspire language teachers to infuse art (history, iconic works, famous artists etc.) into their curricula. This presentation will offer examples of artistic works from ancient and contemporary Italy and will supply templates that can be modified for any language. The workshop will be divided in two parts, the first will be an introduction with examples and ideas by the presenter and the second will be devoted to personalizing the experience for each attendee.

Session 2
Sutton Center

Do you find yourself in a rut doing the same activities over and over again? Do you wish your students were excited to learn a foreign language? Spice up your language class with activities and games that will get your students moving, talking, and having fun. We will share our top activities, which range from no-tech to high-tech and include games, sites, apps, speaking assessments, and more. Many of the activities presented are conducted entirely in the target language to promote communication/ proficiency and to take the fear out of speaking/ learning a language. Join us and bring enthusiasm, energy, and the eagerness to learn back into your classroom! Be sure to bring your device. (WiFi access in the Hilton is not free. 119. EXHIBITOR SESSION: The Future is Now — Developing 21st Century Skills
Session 2
Beekman

In a world where learning never stops, it’s important to equip students with the skills necessary to succeed as future leaders and global citizens. Not only are we teaching our students to function in the three modes of communication and meet the goals of ACTFL’s 5 C’s, we are also promoting creativity, media and technology competency, and life and career skills. This presentation will give examples of how to use videos and articles, as well as online speaking tools to help students at all levels become effective communicators while developing 21st Century Skills.

123. Spanish Community-Engaged Courses to Raise Awareness About Healthy Habits

Session: 2
Nassau West

Students from Conversation and Composition and Spanish for Healthcare Professionals worked cooperatively to develop a program on healthy habits and illness prevention for Spanish-speaking immigrant children ages 5 to 8. Divided into groups, students worked for three consecutive weeks to prepare the final task: A theatrical performance at the university. While this collaborative effort benefited both students and community, special attention was paid to how students’ perceptions of the Hispanic community were shaped. In their final reflective essays, students shared: a positive shaping of their perceptions towards Hispanic community; motivation to participate in community-engaged programs that involved the Spanish-speaking community; and willingness to continue and develop friendships with the Spanish-speaking families they met.

124. Helping Students Thrive in a 90+% Target-Language Classroom

Session: 2
Murray Hill East

Especially when working with novice and intermediate learners, some teachers hesitate to implement ACTFL’s “staying-in-the-target-language” core practice. “If I stay in the target language how will I introduce new vocabulary?” “How will I effectively redirect off-task behavior?” “How will I do centers and have the learning be student-centered rather than teacher-centered?”

Come hear the 2017 NECTFL ToY and author of “Tuesday’s Tips For Staying In The Target Language” give answers to these questions and offer coaching on how to implement a few simple strategies that can help your students thrive in a 90+% target-language use environment.

125. Assessing Versus Grading in the World Language Classroom

Session: 2
Murray Hill West

How do ACTFL proficiency guidelines specifically translate into assessment practices in the world language classroom? Learn how a middle school and a high school French teacher worked together to streamline and align their assessment and grading practices with world language proficiency goals, reflecting best teaching practices and hoping to further greater equity in the classroom. Presenters will distinguish between product, process, and progress; proficiency and performance assessments; diagnostic, formative, and summative assessments; rubric-based assessment versus grading, and student-versus teacher-led learning. Presenters will showcase their assessment and grading practices and provide ready-to-use assessment tools, followed by a question-and-answer session.

Friday, February 9, Session 2, 10:30–11:30 a.m.
The NECTFL #techlab consists of tables led by tech experts, similar to a tech fair. Attendees will come to this session but, instead of sitting down and learning from one presenter only, they will have the opportunity to learn ‘à la carte’ from several world language educators with expertise in instructional technology. Participants may stay as long as they like with one presenter or browse the tables at their own pace. Please bring a laptop, an iPad, or a mobile device and walk away with a new app or with an innovative tech-infused lesson for your students. We regret that WiFi access is not free. Attendees are encouraged to bring their own data plan. All languages and tech skill levels are welcome!

Table 1: Interacting With Digital Natives Through Online Platforms

This session provides hands-on instruction on how to teach digital natives in a more effective way. Following the ACTFL 21st Century Skills Map, this session explores the benefits of incorporating technology into a Chinese language class using ThingLink, Padlet, and Homestyler. Through online learning experiences, students take ownership of their learning and have more opportunities for collaboration and creativity. With the use of technology, teachers can tailor language learning to individual students as they interact, explore, and experiment with the target language and culture. The presenter will show how she uses those online platforms with her classes to present information, develop interactive activities, and better engage with the students. Sample tasks, assessments, and student work will be displayed and student feedback will be discussed. Participants will be able to implement the online platforms right away.

Table 2: Goosechase: Online Vocabulary Scavenger Hunts

Offer students a way to engage with each other and with their vocabulary. Goosechase is an online scavenger hunt tool that offers teachers a way to engage students with vocabulary and comprehension exercises. Students are engaged fully in each mission and can complete them collaboratively or on their own. Goosechase has an activity feed that allows teachers to monitor student progress and offer points for correct answers, or subtract points for incorrect answers or insufficient information. Students practice comprehension skills through their interpretation of the missions, and develop collaboration and problem-solving skills by working with peers to complete each mission.

In this brief presentation, teachers will learn to navigate an example Nearpod lesson, while also being shown the basics on how to set up self-paced or live lessons. Using a computer or other device in a one-to-one environment, students are able to take notes using Nearpod.com and receive immediate feedback on their comprehension. Incorporation of polls, fill-in-the-blank responses, memory match games, collaborative discussions, and quizzes for real-time formative assessment are all features of Nearpod. Nearpod.com facilitates differentiation for varying levels of students and engages several modes of learning.

Table 5: Leveraging Seesaw to Connect Beyond the Classroom

Seesaw, a digital portfolio, is fast becoming a go-to platform for schools to demonstrate what and how students are learning throughout the day. Learn how this multiple-device-friendly tool can be used in the WL classroom to empower proficiency and language acquisition. From students recording their learning, reflections and comments in the TL, to blogging and creating Connected Global Classrooms, Seesaw is a versatile, powerful, and free tech tool. It can be used by an individual teacher or a group of teachers to enhance their students’ use of the TL in real-world situations in the three modes of communication.

Table 8: Going Beyond and Outside the Classroom With Technology

Web 2.0 technology (Voicethread, wikis, and social networks) create environments where students can learn in an active way, by doing things. Moreover, the classroom is no longer the only venue where students can learn a foreign language, nor is the teacher the only provider of input. With these ideas in mind, I will show how tools like Voicethread greatly encourage the extension of language practice beyond the classroom’s walls. Thanks to this tool, the students can “leave” the classroom, be it virtually or physically, create their own contents, exchange information, and make new connections. In this way, learners become more independent, engaged, and prepared for an enduring learning experience.

Table 9: Digital Storytelling: Enhancing Reading and Writing Proficiency

This session presents a collaborative learning technique that enhances reading and writing proficiency for students of Spanish from intermediate-low to intermediate-high levels. Students create digital storytelling sequences based on activities and readings covered in their Grammar and Composition class. Stories such as “Cajas de Cartón” and “Popol Vuh” engage learners’ critical, analytical, and creative cognitive abilities as they synthesize material to retell the tales in their own words. Examples will be demonstrated based on a selection of students’ work.

| 133. High Leverage Teaching Practices for Powerful Language Learning
Featured Session
Session: 3
Sutton North |
| High-leverage teaching practices, based on research across all disciplines, provide a lens for novice and experienced educators to examine their own practice. These practices are more than slogans like “use 90%+ target language.” Unwrap and analyze effective teaching strategies that facilitate target-language comprehensibility, develop interpersonal pair and group conversation skills, and guide the interpretation and analysis of authentic texts. Build a stronger repertoire of effective practices and reflect on how to implement these practices in the classroom. |

Session: 3
Regent |
| For many students, reading in a target language can be an intimidating task. By incorporating research-based reading strategies, texts are made more approachable, and students naturally engage more with the reading. This session will focus on the Before, During, and After strategy for building successful readers. Attendees will be shown a variety of activities for each phase of reading for language classes levels I-V. Then the presenters will facilitate the development of a new lesson as attendees collaborate together. While the presenters’ examples are based around the Spanish language, the concept can be applied and modified to fit any world language classroom. |

| Active student engagement is critical to learning and achieving higher levels of language proficiency, but how can educators create a dynamic and advanced world language class? This session engages participants in the application of the Picture Word Inductive Model, a proven strategy for teaching, listening, reading, writing, and creating stories. This step by step process will lead to unpacking the ACTFL/NCSSFL Can-Do Statements to differentiate, extend, and deepen student stories, and develop differentiated and powerful performing communication tasks, including preparing students for a classroom debate. Participants will have the option to apply and practice their new knowledge in the world language of their choice. Handouts and protocols will be provided to participants. |

Bryant |
| Many students enroll in world language courses because they want to speak in the target language (TL) – a skill that can be frustrating at the novice level. Spontaneity is a requirement of true interpersonal communication, yet novice speakers’ language ability consists of highly practiced words and phrases, and formulaic or memorized questions. With appropriate scaffolding, you can move novice learners into the realm of spontaneity. Explore strategies to engage novice learners that guide them to spontaneous, interpersonal communication in the classroom. Strategies for negotiating meaning while maintaining use of the TL will also be discussed. Soon your students will carry on conversations for longer than you imagined possible! |

TABLE 1: “You” in Costa Rica: ¿Ud., tú or vos?

Part of proficiency in a language is the ability to use appropriate sociolinguistic cues in communication, including forms of direct address. This session details a study to ascertain the modern-day use of "you" (Ud., tú, vos) in Costa Rica (CR). As a second part of the project, the presenters also investigated current practices in U.S. classrooms. The results of both phases of the overall study — interviews with native speakers in CR and online questionnaires of U.S. students and teachers — indicate a gap between foreign language educational practices and the field of second-language acquisition, which touts the importance of sociolinguistic accuracy. In short, U.S. students simply are not aware of what form of “you” to use with whom, where, and when. Proposals for curricular changes are suggested.

TABLE 2: Reexamining Sentence Repetition Tasks to Assess L2 Oral Proficiency

Grounded on the general theory of skill acquisition, repeated practice leads to increased automaticity in language use. Repeating and rehearsing thus play an important part in the second-language (L2) classroom. How far the value of repetition tasks in classroom assessment has awaits investigation. This presentation will report a study of using sentence repetition tasks to assess oral proficiency of L2 learners of Chinese. A computerized sentence repetition test was designed based on the curriculum of a college-level Chinese language program in the U.S. Nineteen learners from the program’s elementary to advanced Chinese courses completed the test. Analysis of participants’ responses reveals that the test can distinguish learners from different levels. Issues of using test results to inform classroom instruction and adapting to online language learning will also be discussed.

TABLE 1: A Cross-Cultural Comparison of Spanish and Italian Routine Speech Acts

Speech acts, like routines, provide insights into the social structure and value system of a speech community. They are highly complex norms of communications — linguistic, social, and pragmatic knowledge must work together harmoniously in order for a speech act to be successfully understood and to avoid cultural misunderstandings and communication breakdowns. This study presents the results obtained from comparing routine speech acts of monolingual Spanish and Italian speakers. The study takes into account the variables of risk, power, and distance as described by Brown and Levinson’s Politeness Theory (1987). The results of the study have an important bearing on language teaching and learning, as language and social structure are strongly related and the rules for the appropriate conduct of speech vary considerably from one culture to another. The study shows that language learners must develop a sensitive awareness when analyzing any culture.

TABLE 2: Using the Similarities Between the Chinese and Korean Languages for Teaching

There are many Chinese words in elementary language classes that share similar pronunciation with Korean words. The same thing happens in Korean language classes. Although Korean is an SOV language, there are still similarities in grammar between Chinese and Korean. However, most Korean students who are learning Chinese and Chinese students who are learning Korean don’t realize it. Therefore, they don’t take advantage of the similarities between the two languages. If we could summarize those similarities in both vocabulary and grammar, it would help the students in both Korean and Chinese classes. This research will be based on two textbooks that are often used in first-year Chinese and Korean college classes. By analyzing the vocabulary and grammar structures covered in both textbooks, the similarities will be found. Suggestions on the teaching strategies to Korean and Chinese students in both classes will be proposed.

In this special session, there will be two presenters stationed at each of the tables, with one presenter sharing his or her topic during the first half and the second presenter during the second half. We recommend that presenters speak/share findings for approximately 18 to 20 minutes, leaving about 10 minutes for discussion and questions. We will repeat this format during the second segment of the session. You may stay at the same table for the entire two presentations, or change tables at mid-session for the second presentation.

Table 4: Intercultural Competence: An Essential Element in Scaffolding Language Proficiency Development

Global competence is highlighted as a World-Readiness Standard (ACTFL, 2015) and thus holds an important focus in lesson planning, teaching, and learning in world language (WL) classrooms. It is also an essential element in developing contextually appropriate language proficiency. Despite the centrality of purpose as defined by the standards, there remains a great deal of discussion surrounding what this term really means and how it can be achieved. Currently, a gap exists in the literature regarding how to best assess students' intercultural competence (ICC). More research is needed on how teachers can purposefully integrate ICC into teaching and consider its impact on student learning. This roundtable will review the models of ICC as proposed in the literature and consider how they are applied in WL education. Presenters will explore the ways in which these models can help teachers evaluate and assess students' ICC in the WL classroom, thus promoting students' deep proficiency and understanding of the target language.

Table 5: Exploring the Connection Between Second-Language Learning and Artistic Development

The purpose of this study is to explore the connection between learning a second language in the elementary grades and artistic inclination, and how it could help to close the Latino achievement gap. Recent research found that students of low socioeconomic status who had high arts engagement were more successful in school and were more likely to enter college. Data included interviews with and observations of four classroom teachers, four special area teachers, and seven students in both bilingual and monolingual classes. Five themes emerged: dual language classes were the highest performing at the school; how bilingual students compared to monolingual students; artistically and musically inclined students; students’ motivation to learn; and students’ experiences learning two languages. The results from this study may help educators to understand how learning a second language can motivate students to be more artistically inclined, as this could lead to greater success in the future for Latinos.

This session will offer a brief overview of the Summer Language Institute for Spanish and French Teachers in Guanajuato, Mexico, and Angers, France. Through this innovative program run by Southern Oregon University, teachers can earn their MA for Spanish/French Language Teaching over the course of two and a half summers, or take classes to earn credit for professional development while living abroad. Unlike traditional theses, our students complete Action Research projects in their classrooms in order to transform their teaching. Recent graduates will share the results of their Action Research investigations. Topics include: “But I Don't Know What to Say”: The Use of a Sentence Opener Strategy and Collaborative Learning Groups to Improve Willingness to Communicate; Re-Examining Second-Year High School Language Expectations: Acquisition of the Present Subjunctive in Noun Clauses; and Teaching Reading Strategies and their Effects on Improving Reading Comprehension Among First-Year Spanish Learners.

Proficiency in an Arabic L2 classroom is Orality. Orality does not exist in Arabic without the heavy usage of the colloquial variety. The newly adopted Integrated Approach in the classroom has ossified and formalized Code Switching to a level where a natural usage of Colloquial is very questionable. Proficiency is suffering all over, and with it, a form of Literacy that is based on the oral tradition and on Arabic as used in native speech communities. In this session we shall share techniques and new curriculum approach that make the Code Switching between colloquial and MSA a natural and spontaneous mechanism.

149. Accommodating Without Compromising: Developing and Measuring Proficiency in Diverse Learners

Featured Session

Session: 4 Sutton North

In this session we will discuss adapting existing materials and strategies through the lens of the proficiency mindset and ACTFL core practices in order to accommodate diverse learners. We will share and develop strategies to satisfy and surpass the requirements in IEPs/504s, increase effectiveness, and raise student confidence without compromising the quality of instruction. A sample unit on internet safety and digital citizenship will be presented and attendees will collaborate to adapt the unit for their classes. The sample unit includes multiple avenues for assessment to allow students to demonstrate proficiency in an authentic context.

150. Best of VA: The “Unspoken” Communicative Contract: Target Language Bullseye!

Session: 4 Sutton South

Whether using Effie’s Euro System or academic incentives, the stakeholders must first understand the Communicative Contract. It’s not magical or punitive. This innovative approach to human interaction will change the way you and your students reach the target language goals we all have (or should have) for our classrooms. Awareness of this reality is the first step toward realization of an effective target language environment. Expectations and proficiency increase while classroom management issues decrease. Students love it when they feel able. Empower them through your belief that they can communicate. Supervisors welcomed!

151. Bringing Proficiency to the Foreground Through Re-Assessment

Session: 4 Sutton Center

Proficiency is not a snapshot; it is developed and strengthened over time. As a result, more and more teachers are embracing the idea of allowing students to re-assess to demonstrate their proficiency. But what does it actually look like in the classroom? How can we make it less of a headache and more of a remedy? In this session, we will discuss the advantages and disadvantages of re-assessment and identify methods to ease its implementation. Attendees will leave with a plan for re-assessment in their classrooms that emphasizes student learning and provides a pathway for documenting growth.

152. 90-10: Purposeful Target Language and English Use for Teachers and Students

Session: 4 Regent

We should all strive for “90%+” target language (TL) use. But 90% for whom? Just the teacher? What about the students? And what about that other 10%? When is it OK for me to use English? Language use in both English and the TL should be planned and purposeful, both for teachers and for students. Many teachers appreciate the importance of using the TL, but haven’t developed a deep understanding of when English use is appropriate. By understanding when and how to use English in the classroom, attendees will be more successful in reaching the 90%+ target language goal. We’ll look at appropriate language use, comprehensible input, and strategies for keeping students in the TL even when your back is turned!

153. Reading for Meaning: Students, Texts, Strategies

Session: 4 Beekman

When planning reading experiences, teachers must build tasks based upon selecting texts that fit with themes being studied, with the interests and experiences of students, and most importantly with implications from research. It is also important to recognize that each reader is different in terms of background knowledge, interests, motivation, and strategy control. Likewise, texts have internal structures, purpose, and author intent that need to be considered. This combination of text-plus-reader means that each task has slightly different parameters. Student reading proficiency is not absolute and cannot be neatly classified, for the success with which readers access meaning shifts with the actual documents. This session explores how to design interpretive tasks based upon the student, the text, and effective strategies.

154. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Let’s Get Interpersonal

Session: 4 Bryant

To build proficiency, students need to be speaking much more than the 26 seconds research tells us that they get every day. The speaking tasks must involve meaningful communication that takes place between individuals who listen, respond, and reflect on a given topic. We will take a look at the whys and the hows to engage your students in lively and fun interpersonal activities from the minute they walk into the classroom until the bell rings at the end of the period, showcasing the abundant interpersonal activities found in EMC French and Spanish programs!

155. Maximizing Study Abroad: Combining Language Proficiency and Intercultural Development
Session: 4 Nassau East

Study abroad has the potential to foster significant language gains. However, studies have shown that students make uneven progress while abroad. In general, the main reasons are lack of contact with the target language and difficulties with intercultural development. To heighten the benefits of the year abroad for students in our International Engineering Program, we have developed a sequence of interventions designed to increase students' contact with the language while abroad. The interventions also foster their development of intercultural competence. We will present sample interventions and describe how they relate to the ACTFL Proficiency Scale and to Milton Bennett’s Development Model of Intercultural Sensitivity.

156. Proficiency for a Purpose
Session: 4 Nassau West

Why become proficient in French, German, Italian, or Spanish? Among other reasons, because they are among the important languages in the European Union. This presentation will describe an interdisciplinary minor in European Union/European Studies, funded by a Title VI grant from the U.S. Department of Education. The minor promotes language proficiency in one of these four languages with the goal of developing competence in candidates who might seek positions in government, business, and industry, among other areas. It includes supporting courses in related areas, along with the option of Language across the Curriculum and distance learning with European partner institutions. Participants will learn the details and benefits of such a program and discuss possible implications.

157. Authentically Elementary
Session: 4 Murray Hill East

What does language learning with authentic resources look like in the world language classroom? No textbooks! No vocabulary lists! Just real-world learning! Participants in this session will explore various teaching strategies that are based on authentic resources and real-world contexts. These strategies have been created for the elementary Spanish classroom, but can easily be used in any world language classroom. From game shows to hashtags, these strategies appeal to a variety of learners and encourage interpretive, interpersonal, presentational speaking, and presentational writing skills in the target language. All strategies have been teacher-tested and student-approved!

158. Fostering K-16 Collaboration and Articulation
Session: 4 Murray Hill West

This panel session will provide insights into key issues and challenges regarding articulation from K-16. Members of the panel will address topics and questions about programming from K-12, elementary, community college, and four-year universities. As more states award the Seal of Biliteracy, the challenge is for programs to be well-articulated and focused on proficiency-based instruction so that we, as a group of professionals, can deliver students with functional language to our communities and workforce. Members from NADSFL and other state organizations will share information about articulation and audience members will generate questions based on their own needs to personalize the presentation for participants. Join us to help foster more collaboration among our NECTFL colleagues and to unleash the power of proficiency for all of our K-16 students.

159. PBLL for the Greater Good
Session: 4
Gramercy East
Project-Based Language Learning is a method of engaging students in content inquiry while keeping them in the Target Language. It necessitates spontaneous interactions and creates a classroom culture of collaborative interpersonal communication that works toward a common goal. The service component offers the opportunity to grow empathy in your students, giving them the gift of authenticity of purpose as well as audience, and showing them they have the power to make positive change in their world. This session will give an overview of PBLL; tips to scaffold language use; ways to make connections with other classes, other professionals, and other content areas; project suggestions; and ways to bring your students' voices into the planning process.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Tracy Brady, Elmira City Schools, Elmira, NY

161. Power Up the Presentational Mode!
Session: 4
Gibson
In this session we will focus on the presentational mode by addressing the development of students' writing skills. We will present strategies to help teachers create customized authentic writing tasks for various acquisition levels and adapt them for the purposes of differentiated instruction reflecting various students' interests, strengths, and levels of needed support. Participants will discuss how to embed principled and repeated writing practice into their curriculum and assess students' progress in writing with the help of formative and summative instruments.

162. EXHIBITOR SESSION: The Standards for Classical Language Learning: Inspiration and Application
Session: 4
Clinton
Explore the new Standards for Classical Language Learning! Participants will learn about the framework and explore strategies to allow the Standards to inform their teaching and to support student learning. The presentation will focus on the new framework of Standards for Classical Language Learning and their use in classrooms at all levels. Participants will become familiar with the components and terminology of the new Standards, with a focus on Communications. Participants will explore assessment strategies as part of the Standards-Based curriculum, and will explore assessments of all types, including proficiency, performance, and achievement.

164. From Class to Community — Language Outreach at the Library
Session: 4
Concourse F
This presentation summarizes a language outreach project at the local library and explains how undergraduate students from the university were involved in teaching languages to children. This pilot project was a collaboration between two instructors of German and Arabic and the public library. The undergraduate students volunteered to assist with this service-learning project and helped in the delivery of the content. A feedback survey was administered that helped to understand the undergraduates’ perspective on the outreach project. A vocabulary test was used to determine possible effects of the service-learning project on the college students’ vocabulary knowledge. The presentation will summarize the results from the surveys and vocabulary tests and will outline ways to connect college students with the community through language enrichment programs.

Friday, February 9, Session 5, 4:15–5:15 p.m.
171. Multikulti Bremen
Session: 5 Nassau East

This session will provide an overview of the presenter’s experiences taking part in a professional development course at the Goethe Institut in Bremen. The session will include a number of examples and materials from the course, as well as suggestions for implementing a culture and geography unit on the German city-state of Bremen. With a quarter of Bremen’s population being of non-German origin, the multicultural aspects of the city-state and observations of the area’s recent influx of immigration will also be presented.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Michael Bendorf, Sparta High School, Sparta, NJ

Intended Audience(s):
High School & College

Keyword: Professional development

Examples in: German

Language(s) spoken: German, English

172. Developing World Language Proficiency Through Effective Use of Authentic Material
Session: 5 Nassau West

Unleashing students’ power to obtain world language proficiency includes the need to develop students’ intercultural awareness. This is especially important in regard to France’s current challenges of national and cultural identity. This session examines how to address the phenomenon of immigration and the reshaping of French identity via the critical study of French newspapers, popular film, and song. The presentation exemplifies how to use these different forms of media to train students’ skill set in the three modes of communication, to develop higher-level thinking skills, and to unleash students’ power to become more proficient in the target language and to achieve intercultural awareness.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Alexandra Reuber, Ph.D., Tulane University, New Orleans, LA

Intended Audience(s): Four-year College/University

Keyword: Materials

Examples in: French, English

Language(s) spoken: English

173. NNELL Networking “Un-Con” Session
Session: 5 Murray Hill East

The NNELL Networking Session is an opportunity for early language educators PreK-8 to meet for an open discussion to swap ideas and professionally connect with early childhood, elementary, and middle school world language educators from around the region. This will be run in an “un-conference” style session to foster ideas, conversation, and, most importantly, engagement between attendees.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Marissa Coulehan, The Dalton School, New York, NY

Intended Audience(s): PreK-8

Keyword: Professional development

Examples in: English

Language(s) spoken: English

174. Incorporating Science Topics in the Spanish Curriculum to Foster Proficiency
Session: 5 Murray Hill West

Participants will learn about frameworks for designing a project-based unit that integrates language, science, and technology to foster linguistic and intercultural competence. The unit explores global environmental issues in Latin America and Spain. It incorporates a multidisciplinary approach (historical, socioeconomic, environmental, health) to discuss diminishing water resources and the lack of access to clean, fresh water. The goals are to develop students’ critical thinking and analytical skills by establishing connections between language, content, and culture. Students acquire and practice specific grammatical structures and relevant vocabulary targeting different communicative skills. They increase their understanding of certain historical events while drawing parallels with present sociopolitical practices. Secondly, they reflect upon the impact of local challenges on their own community, and debate about global environmental issues and devise practical solutions to real-life problems.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Mariana San Martin, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, MA
Ana Yanez, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, MA

Intended Audience(s): High School & College

Keyword: Instructional strategies

Examples in: Spanish

Language(s) spoken: English, Spanish

175. Mead Project: Creating Classical Connections
Session: 5 Gramercy East

This session will introduce the hub website Creating Classics Connections, which was created with the advice and mentorship of my NECTFL Mead Fellowship for 2017. This website seeks to serve as a hub for sharing resources for teaching, professional development opportunities, and connecting teachers of Latin and Greek for support. Eventually, the plan is for the hub to expand to cover all New England Classics programs and resources and to create a mentoring program for early career Classics teachers. Participants will discuss what teachers resources would be most valuable for teachers and how to use the resources currently available for Classics teachers.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Maureen Lamb, Kingswood Oxford School, W. Hartford, CT

Intended Audience(s): PreK-16+ (all)

Keyword: Professional development

Examples in: Latin, English

Language(s) spoken: English

176. Music in the Foreign Language Classroom: Unleashing the Power of Proficiency
Session: 5 Gramercy West

When it comes to obtaining authentic materials for foreign language classes, we might consider music. But how do we use it effectively? Can we use it in a way that will enhance our students' proficiency in the target language? This presentation will explore different techniques to optimize the use of music in the foreign language classroom. We will use authentic songs in the target languages and create interpretive, interpersonal, and presentational tasks in a fun and creative way. This could also be an innovative way to create IPAs and assess our students' proficiency in the target language.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Yeri López, Northern Valley Regional High School, Old Tappan, NJ and St. Peter's University, Jersey City, NJ

Intended Audience(s): High School & College

177. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Keep Them Talking in the TL, the RLRA Way!
Session: 5
Gibson

Teachers from the Avery Coonley School will share strategies for facilitating 100% use of the target language by teachers and students. Learn about a fun accountability system, tips for using engaging partner activities, and tools that allow students to start speaking in the target language from day one. Go home with a free sample lesson to try with your classes!

179. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Proficiency is Trending Again!
Session: 5
Madison

Need ready-made, proficiency-style activities to motivate your students? Proficiency Press will provide you with fun, communicative, culturally based activities that will engage your students throughout the period. From Performance Assessment in the three modes to Read to Write Tasks, you will be able to use these materials immediately with your students. E-chapters featuring all proficiency-style activities can be downloaded and shown to your students using the latest technology in your classrooms. Internet Tasks provide students with culturally based websites and activities that will capture their interest. These materials are aligned with the ACTFL World Language Readiness Standards.

181. NECTFL Awards Ceremony and Reception
Regent
6:00–7:30 p.m.

Join us as we recognize our 2018 NECTFL award winners, NECTFL Teacher of the Year (TOY), Mead Fellows, and all Northeast Region TOY candidates.
The following sessions have been specially recognized by the Program Committee for their strong connection to the theme:

Unleashing the POWER of Proficiency. All featured sessions are scheduled in Sutton North, with one per session time slot.

202. Learning With the News and Social Media

Session: 6 Sutton North

Using current events has always been a vital resource in the classroom. Today, with events being reported by news sources and eyewitness accounts on social media, the amount of material can prove to be daunting to incorporate. Using target language news sources, tweets, and online videos has proven for my language students to be the next-best thing to actually being in the country. Language students are able to engage with native speakers and their unique perspectives through units created incorporating such sources. Participants will leave this workshop with a better understanding of how to integrate current events into an Integrated Performance Assessment and will leave with concrete examples of IPA activities for intermediate-mid learners. While this workshop uses examples in Italian and Spanish, it can be applied to any language class.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Beatriz Pelaez-Martinez, Tenafly High School, Tenafly, NJ

Intended Audience(s): Secondary (6-12)

Keyword: Instructional strategies

Examples in: Italian, Spanish

Language(s) spoken: English

220. 90%+: Promoting Target Language Use for Performance

Session: 7 Sutton North

What makes for a truly rich environment for language learning? Consistent target language use plus a focus on student performance! Explore practical strategies on TL use by teachers and learners in the context of performance-based instruction: connecting with learners through their own demonstrably successful language use. We’ll illustrate, brainstorm, and demonstrate activities and techniques that promote positive conditions for language learning through 90%+ TL use and that help students develop proficiency and confidence.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Charlotte Gifford, Greenfield Community College, MA

Intended Audience(s): PreK-16+ (all)

Keyword: Instructional strategies

Examples in: French, Spanish

Language(s) spoken: English

237. Focus Learning With Can-Do Statements

Session: 8 Sutton North

New NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements capture improvements in each Mode of Communication (Interpersonal, Interpretive, and Presentational) as learners move across the proficiency continuum. Can-Do Statements also showcase indicators of increasing competence in intercultural communication. This session examines learning indicators and sample tasks that guide the development and assessment of learners’ improvement in using language as they demonstrate communicative interactions; understanding what is heard, read, or viewed; and creating written messages.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Ali Moeller, Ph.D., ACTFL President & University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Lincoln, NE

Marty Abbott, ACTFL

Intended Audience(s): PreK-16+ (all)

Keyword: Curriculum

Examples in: Several

Language(s) spoken: English

253. Adapt the Task, Not the Text; Or, Tier the Text!

Session: 9 Sutton North

Using authentic text in the world language classroom provides a cultural and linguistic context for our learners. Interacting with authentic text provides input to students and supports increasing their language proficiency. In this session, we will explore how to adapt tasks for authentic text to meet the needs of all learners across the proficiency continuum. We will do so by tiering — providing scaffolding and support for struggling learners and open-ended, more challenging tasks for advanced learners. We will also explore how to tier text on the same themes and create generic tasks that span the tiers.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Leslie Grahn, Howard County Public Schools, retired, MD

Intended Audience(s): PreK-16+ (all)

Keyword: Instructional strategies

Examples in: Several

Language(s) spoken: English

269. Words With Friends: Vocabulary Acquisition for Proficiency

Session: 10 Sutton North

What does learning vocabulary really mean, how does it happen, and what environments lead to it? No matter what our instructional beliefs are, we all can agree that having a pool of useful, usable, and personally meaningful words is a critical factor in students growing as language users. This session identifies five critical aspects of vocabulary learning and explores how these aspects are realized in the classroom, including the connection to student engagement and motivation.

Organizer/Presenter(s):
Greta Lundgaard, Independent Consultant, Dallas, TX

Intended Audience(s): Secondary (6-12)

Keyword: Research

| Session: Bryant | 207. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Not Your Language(s) spoken: English
|----------------|--------------------------------------------------|
| Description: Authentic, proficiency-based assessments are better for our students but can be difficult to design, implement, and evaluate. This session will help teachers tackle this challenge by demonstrating the benefits of incorporating technology in oral proficiency assessment. Using a variety of tasks and video recording tools, we will discuss how to consistently track student oral proficiency growth in the three modes while also unleashing the POWER of the student voice. Come experience our process of designing engaging sets of tasks that provide ample practice, feedback, and creativity for students. We will present tasks from multiple languages and examples from Spanish students. Put our methods to the test through discussion and creation of tasks for your own students. When proficiency assessment is efficient, effective, and engaging, the oral exam can become the best part of your language class.

| Session: Murray Hill West | 209. Teaching Language, Culture, and History Through Music: A Model Course
|--------------------------|--------------------------------------------------|
| Description: This session details a model course for teaching language, culture, and history through musical content. This immersion course departs from the norm by using song genres/lyrics through time as its organizing principle. The use of authentic music and lyrics enables the instructor to provide visual, audio, social, and contextual cues to language learners, and permits students to immerse themselves in the vivid imagery and other multi-faceted stimuli of the historical, lyrical, and cultural eras addressed. Exploring language, culture, and history through music and lyrics provides a variety of pedagogical learning opportunities that serve to stimulate and motivate student learning. Pre- and post-course questionnaire results and comments from students will be discussed. Though originally taught as an advanced Mandarin Chinese course, the presenters believe that this format is easily generalizable across languages and cultures.

| Session: Gramercy East | 210. Inclusive Foreign Language Learning Environments
|---------------------|--------------------------------------------------|
| Description: As we strive to allow all learners access to the many benefits of language learning, as called for by ACTFL, we face numerous challenges in making our language learning environments more inclusive. This session will explore the results of a survey of language educators in NYS regarding challenges they have faced in making their language classrooms more inclusive and potential solutions. Topics discussed will include available resources, special education support, policies and practices, and understandings of varied learner needs. The session will include time for participant discussion; we’d love to hear about your experiences!

| Session: Madison | 211. Vivons la langue française!
|----------------|--------------------------------------------------|
| Description: Because a language is not translated word by word but a living experience, we will be showing in our workshop how to communicate in real situations. Students become ‘actors’ in their own learning and this way we help them to learn French naturally!
| Organizer/Presenters: Maggie Muir Shyllock, Franklin Township High School, Somerset, NJ

| Session: Madison | 212. Spain Study Abroad for Teachers and Their Students
|-----------------|--------------------------------------------------|
| Description: In this presentation, participants will learn how study abroad can benefit them as well as their students. The presenter will compare study abroad trips and cultural tours, and using a company versus designing a trip from scratch; and will investigate what designing one from scratch entails and how it’s accessible to all students, especially those coming from socio-economic challenges. Information will be provided to allow teachers and students the opportunities of lifelong language learning as they gain world knowledge and improve their Spanish proficiency while exploring a new culture!
| Organizer/Presenters: Mary Caitlin Wight, Ph.D., SUNY Geneseo, Geneseo, NY
| Intended Audience(s): Secondary (6-12)

| Session: Madison | 213. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Powerful Authentic Communication in the Spanish Classroom
|-----------------|--------------------------------------------------|
| Description: This session demonstrates strategies and resources to develop authentic Spanish communication in the interpretive, interpersonal, and presentational modes. We will explore ways to provide comprehensible input, scaffold communicative activities, and assess using performance-based tasks. We will examine resources that can be used and discuss the best practices of all participants.

214. Maupassant and Gide: Two Integrated Lesson Plans

Session: 6
Concourse: A

In this session I will propose two full lesson plans based on Maupassant’s “Parure” and the prologue of Gide’s “Symphonie pastorale.” The lesson plans will expand upon current events in the news, infographics about social data in the French-speaking-world, artwork, movies, documentaries, and grammar practice. I will also share ideas on how to adjust these lessons for students from intermediate to advanced levels, how to adapt the material and activities to a differentiated classroom, and how to integrate the five Cs of language learning: Communication, Cultures, Connections, Comparisons, and Communities. Examples will be mostly in French, with some comparative readings from Virgil’s “Aeneid” and Dante’s “Divine Comedy.”

215. All Students Can Succeed: Interpersonal and Presentational Models

Session: 6
Concourse: B

The skills needed to be successful in the interpersonal and presentational assessments on the AP exam can be practiced from day one. This workshop will support the integration of written and spoken assessments at every level using the AP free-response items as a model, regardless of curriculum themes and regardless of AP participation. Participants will learn how to create assessments that scaffold, leading students to increasing the complexity of discourse. We will share examples of speaking exercises at all levels and give some fresh writing ideas, encouraging participants to reflect on how they can modify already-existing assessments to be more aligned to proficiency standards. Participants will walk away with tips and tricks for immediate implementation. We will show examples, share resources, and have participants contribute their own ideas.

216. Learning Strategies and Multiple Intelligences in the Language Classroom

Session: 6
Concourse: E

Learning another language is a highly personalized process. As teachers, we aim to incorporate different activities to address our students’ learning styles, but are also influenced by our own preferences for learning strategies and intelligences. This presentation highlights the use of student questionnaires on learning strategies and multiple intelligences in A1-B2 German-language classrooms. Teachers can use the information in the questionnaires to get a better idea of how their students prefer to learn, to create a broader and more varied spectrum of classroom activities, to raise student awareness of different strategies and intelligences, and to maximize student learning without compromising teaching methodology.

217. Language and Culture Through Contemporary Film

Session: 6
Concourse: F

While movies such as “Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon” have helped Chinese cinema broaden its appeal and consolidate its position as a significant force in international cinema, such historical fantasies won’t do much to help students understand issues facing current Chinese society. How can contemporary film be used as a source of authentic language input and impetus to L2 communication? In this workshop, attendees will learn how contemporary film can be used to meet these goals. First, there will be a PowerPoint introduction to the pedagogical rationale behind the material and methods, and then a film clip and a simulated lesson with the attendees. After viewing another clip, attendees will brainstorm ideas on how to prepare a lesson on that clip. This session will be of special interest to teachers of Chinese, but will include discussion of ideas applicable to any language and all levels from intermediate to advanced.

219. General Session and Keynote Address

9:45–10:45 a.m. Sutton

All attendees are welcome to join us for our general session and keynote address by Dr. Eileen Glisan.

Dr. Eileen W. Glisan is Distinguished University Professor of Spanish and Foreign Language Education at Indiana University of Pennsylvania (IUP), where she coordinates the Spanish Education K-12 Program. She was President of ACTFL in 2010 and certified by ACTFL as an oral proficiency tester of Spanish. In 1997 she was Chair of the Northeast Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (NECTFL) and was also President of the Pennsylvania State Modern Language Association (PSMLA). She is co-author of Teacher’s Handbook: Contextualized Language Instruction, a leading methodology text now in its fifth edition. She is also co-author of the newly published text, Enacting the Work of Language Instruction: High-Leverage Teaching Practices, and of the 2013 text, Implementing Integrated Performance Assessment. She has published numerous articles in edited books and scholarly journals such as The Modern Language Journal, Foreign Language Annals, and The Canadian Modern Language Review. Dr. Glisan is the recipient of several awards including the 2012 PSMLA Frank Mulhern Leadership Award for Outstanding Leadership in World Languages and Cultures, the 1996 Anthony Papalia Award for Excellence in Teacher Education, given by ACTFL and the New York State Association of Foreign Language Teachers, and the 2008 Nelson H. Brooks Award for Distinguished Service and Leadership to the Profession given by NECTFL.

220. 90%+: Promoting Target Language Use for Performance

Featured Session

Session 7 Sutton North

What makes for a truly rich environment for language learning? Consistent target language use plus a focus on student performance! Explore practical strategies on TL use by teachers and learners in the context of performance-based instruction: connecting with learners through their own demonstrably successful language use. We’ll illustrate, brainstorm, and demonstrate activities and techniques that promote positive conditions for language learning through 90%+ TL use and that help students develop proficiency and confidence.

221. Best of MD: Risky Business: Strategies to Encourage Risk Taking in the Classroom

Session 7 Sutton South

Developing a teacher and student growth mindset can be a challenge. However, being a risk taker is an essential part of language acquisition. Join us in this interactive session as we present strategies that will encourage risk taking in the classroom. We will focus on engaging activities and creating an environment that will foster student centered learning and increased teacher creativity. Participants will leave with concrete ideas for classroom design, a list of options for student demonstration of knowledge for a variety of proficiency levels, and different methods for giving and receiving feedback between student, parent and teacher. Bring your shades, it’ll be cool!

222. Opposing Dictatorship and Building Identity via Music, Literature, and Film

Session 7 Sutton Center

This interactive session will engage in the analysis of different pieces of music, short stories, and film that emerged to overcome oppression and forge a new identity during the Spanish Civil War, Spanish dictatorship, and La Transición. This hands-on presentation will offer practical examples of activities that align with the 5 Cs, and where participants will acquire strategies to prepare students to analyze culture and language within a content-based unit through the three modes of communication. With the use of culturally authentic materials, this presentation will provide strategies to help students develop cultural competency and critical thinking.

Community is the centerpiece around which the other Standards can and should align. The basic human needs of survival, belonging, and competence are met in a community. The other Standards can and should align. Come experience how to change that with a simple, articulated instructional approach that works with any program or resources. When students begin with the “community of one,” they know they’re going to survive our class. When they connect to others, and develop expertise, they experience themselves as belonging to the world and being competent. Through Community, communicative proficiency becomes a personal, practical tool, and the result is transformative, in class and in life.

This session will offer practical ways to build an elementary modern language program through integration with core academic subject areas, art, movement, and drama. Through the development of authentic resources and important partnerships, your school will learn how to develop students’ core competencies in the discipline. Specifically, teachers and administrators at this session will learn how to: build lessons and activities that use TPS and TPRS to increase student engagement; explore new ways of assessing students in the modern language classroom; develop an interdisciplinary lens that can be used to build FLES curriculum. Practical examples will be provided from the experience of launching a Spanish elementary program within the traditional self-contained classroom. Through exploratory study and an eye toward integrated learning, these presenters have developed methods for using modern language while teaching science, art, movement, music, and social studies.

This session explores the integration of a podcast assignment for a content-based course. In lieu of writing a traditional research paper, students create a 7-minute audio segment. In addition to honing their research skills, students build listening comprehension skills as they integrate authentic exterior expert/scholarly voices (interviews, online presentations, documentaries) into their podcasts to substantiate their findings. Students also reinforce and expand French speaking skills through a digital medium that allows them to hear their mistakes via playback. Peer- and self-critique motivates them to rehearse and re-record until they get it right. Finally, requiring students to produce media, with all of its multi-layered implications, better positions them to approach media texts with a critical eye and ear, thereby contributing to their media literacy.

Saturday Session Descriptions

230. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Polyglot Interactive Language Learning Games

Session: 7, Clinton

Join Flobots MC and 2017 CCFLT Friend of Foreign Languages Award recipient Jonny 5 for a highly engaging musical and interactive workshop sponsored by Smithsonian Student Adventures. This nationally known performing artist will keep you entertained and involved with choral rhymes, immersive group games, and other interactive activities in both Spanish and French. Workshop will be conducted in both languages, based in part upon attending participants. No English allowed! Opportunity for debriefing and discussion will take place at the end of the session to discuss how teachers can incorporate this method in the classroom.

231. EXHIBITOR SESSION: Chinese Through a Global Network Classroom

Session: 7, Madison

The session will chiefly focus on strategies to improve student motivation and natural language acquisition of the Chinese language through researched and proven methodologies. Our strategies will revolve around using project-based learning, cultural activities, and ways to connect students learning Chinese to native Chinese speakers, fostering a community of learners. One core strategy is to provide teachers with innovative supplemental teaching materials to use in a PBL format within the classroom. This will be especially useful in consolidating both language and culture into the lessons. Participants will be able to use what we discussed in the workshop to develop their curriculums, and to usher in a natural language acquisition process to motivate students in practicing their new skills on their own.

232. Instructional Strategies for Authentic Interaction and High Engagement

Session: 7, Concourse A

The content for this session has been carefully selected from specific recommendations made by practicing teachers in a graduate course called Education Across Cultures (UVA). The teachers have assembled the best of the best in culturally engaging tools, which have been incorporated into full lesson plans (student handouts, alignments, technology options, differentiation recommendations, rubrics). A resource kit will be provided to each attendee. The group will explore the uses and benefits of the instructional strategies. This workshop supports foreign language, ELL, and bilingual program teachers. Join established and new teachers for collaboration and the professional exchange of ideas and resources.

233. Interactive Reading and Digital Glossing of Authentic Material

Session: 7, Concourse B

Increasing popularity of technology in the classroom has led to an increased need for foreign language students to be both biletterate and digitally literate. Digital glossing sites such as ReadLang, LingQ, and Anki allow reading materials to be easily accessed and annotated digitally. These tools are found to be most effective when they include additional resources such as images or videos, lexical and contextual clarification, and definitions in context. These sites provide an individualized and engaging interactive reading experience that allows readers to access authentic material at their level and provide review methods that, based on research, improve vocabulary acquisition and reading comprehension in language learners.

234. From Chapters to Chatter: Priming Your Program for Proficiency

Session: 7, Concourse E

Language proficiency is defined as the ability of an individual to use culturally appropriate language to communicate spontaneously in non-rehearsed contexts. Every language student wants to exit her or his second-language course with the ability to speak the language studied. Many textbook driven curricula and assessments do not adequately foster this skill. This session will provide participants with the tools necessary to begin the transition to a proficiency-oriented, performance-based curriculum with thematic units, while maintaining the importance of the textbook as a valuable resource. The presenter, a K-12 district department chair for world languages, will share her experiences leading the transition in her district. A variety of current resources will be shared, including helpful ACTFL publications.

235. Dance With Chinese Characters: Hook Your Students in Character Learning

Session: 7, Concourse F

The composition of Chinese characters is so unique that it invokes awe and fears in world language students. This presentation will explore various instructional approaches that help students understand the logic behind character formation, develop fluency in applying strokes, enhance character identification, and fuel their passion for successful character scholarship. With these techniques, students will gain appreciation of the creativity and beauty in the character design and will develop a new memorization and recalling mode – “idea – meaning – image” – rather than the “sounding out” mode – “idea – sound – letters.” The participants will investigate learning approaches and harvest some effective and fantastic strategies for multi-intelligent classroom instruction, including dancing, movement, storytelling, chanting, drawing, talk shows, and games. Participants will not be surprised to hear their students cheer: “Yay! Another character sheet!”

Featured Session

Session: 8
Sutton North

New NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements capture improvements in each Mode of Communication (Interpersonal, Interpretive, and Presentational) as learners move across the proficiency continuum. Can-Do Statements also showcase indicators of increasing competence in intercultural communication. This session examines learning indicators and sample tasks that guide the development and assessment of learners’ improvement in using language as they demonstrate communicative interactions; understanding what is heard, read, or viewed; and creating written messages.

Your district or institution has permitted devices in the classroom and told you to use them. Now what? This session introduces quick, free tech tools that will allow you to facilitate teacher-student and student-student collaboration inside and outside of the French classroom. The focus will be on easy-to-use tools and on using student-generated data to guide lesson planning. You will leave with access to the presentation and examples to show your students or to use in class, including rubrics for assessment. You will be active participants, using some of the sample tools during this session and sharing ideas for implementation.

241. Awesome Assessments and Activities with Authentic Resources

Session: 8
Beekman

What is an authentic resource? Where do I find them, and how do I use them? In this workshop, we will focus on using authentic resources and how students can benefit from using them in their classes. Participants will learn how to locate and use them when you are transitioning to a proficiency-based classroom. Authentic resources can help with student motivation and encourage students to communicate in a meaningful way in the target language. Authentic resources are also great when used as forms of assessment, and participants will learn of ways in which authentic resources can be used to assess in the three modes of proficiency. Although examples shown will be in French and Spanish, authentic resources are beneficial to all language teachers at any level.

242. POWer of Digital Narratives in the Foreign Language Classroom

Session: 8
Bryant

Film has been used as a tool in the classroom to address the Connections, Comparisons, Communication, and Culture of language learning. Digital narratives connect us to the communities in which our students reside. This workshop screens youth-created films in a variety of languages, shares lessons on how to implement these materials in class, and shows you, step by step, how to create your own. Films from the United Nations Plural + Film Festival will be shown.

243. Using the 5 Es to Develop Student Proficiency
Session: 8 Murray Hill East

Using the 5 Es (Engage, Explore, Explain, Elaborate, Evaluate), teachers can design instruction that focuses on what students can do with language, rather than on what they know about language. The presenter will share how this lens from scientific investigation can be adapted to the world language classroom. With scaffolding, teachers can engage their students in exploring with hands-on, minds-on strategies. The presenter will supply examples applicable to multiple levels of language learners to show how these investigations in the real world can spark student engagement. Participants can revamp existing lessons or create new ones in which students address engaging ideas in the TL. Students who focus on what they can do with the language take greater ownership of discovering similarities and differences across cultures as they engage, explore, explain, elaborate, and evaluate while using the TL.

244. Bringing Life, Purpose, and Meaning to Your Novice Descriptions Unit
Session: 8 Murray Hill West

Learning to describe people is often a required skill in world language curriculum, but can easily get boring and repetitive. Come see how two middle school Spanish teachers tackle stereotypes and celebrate both differences and being yourself with their novice Spanish learners. Get ideas about how to use memes, commercials, tweets, infographics, and other authentic resources to bring culture to every lesson. Initially inspired by Bomba Estéreo’s “Soy yo,” this unit is designed for novice learners but can be adapted for any proficiency level. Add deeper meaning to your descriptions unit and get your students talking all about themselves on a whole new level!

245. Mead Project: Exploring Student Collaboration – Ideas and Assessments
Session: 8 Gramercy East

Student collaboration in the classroom – a 21st century soft skill that transcends the school environment. Research shows this is an essential skill for today’s society. Benefits to student collaboration include the definition of leadership skills, the creation of social support groups, and the recognition of different learning styles. How do we create assignments to foster collaboration, and how do we assess collaboration? After looking at some theory, participants will walk away with some class-ready lessons and rubrics that require students to work together. Some possible ideas include: escape rooms; X versus Y – Who would win?; and “put your favorites in order.” We would differentiate from level 1 beginners to advanced students. We ask participants to come ready to share their own ideas and lessons.

246. The POWER of Authentic Resources
Session: 8 Gibson

From a proficiency standpoint, learners want to have the skills to converse while traveling abroad. Yet a common complaint in world language is that classroom instruction does not always lead to increased proficiency. Even after years of studying, students often struggle to understand and find holding down a conversation challenging. Adding authentic resources seems like it would be the ideal panacea. Authentic resources provide rich language and cultural material, yet learners are not accustomed to the speed and cadence of native speakers, and will often check out. The purpose of this session is to demonstrate how to effectively present authentic resources in a way that students can understand. By front-loading vocabulary and designing activities using the target language, teachers will be able to prepare students to use language effectively. It’s augmenting comprehension and strengthening their proficiency in the interpretive mode.

247. Teaching to Cultural and Linguistic Proficiency Through Media
Session: 8 Clinton

This presentation focuses on teaching intercultural competence through media at different proficiency levels. As world language teachers know, the use of real and authentic materials is crucial for both linguistic and intercultural competence. The presenters will share didactic approaches and successful lessons to demonstrate how intercultural and linguistic competence can be simultaneously fostered through the integration of film, newspaper articles, and news recordings. The session will start with a brief theoretical presentation on intercultural competence. Next, participants will be guided through a presentation of examples stemming from an introductory course, a conversation and composition course, and a business German course where the students' proficiency levels ranged from novice to advanced. Can-Do Statements are used in each course as a way to assess progress. The last part of the session will be spent discussing and generating further ideas. Participants will receive blueprints to develop their own teaching materials and apply them in their classes. Some background knowledge of world language teaching and German is required for this presentation.

Descriptions of All Workshops and Sessions

248. Future Teachers and the Art of Planning to Improve

Session: 8
Concourse: A
Madison

This session describes an effective approach to practice-based world language teacher preparation (e.g. Troyan et. al, 2013) that immerses future teachers in community-based, reflective practice (Schön, 1986). The novice teachers learn about and engage in several high-leverage teaching practices (e.g. TeachingWorks; Hlas & Hlas, 2012) in an authentic teaching and learning setting, and develop the ability to lesson-plan in a way that fosters meaningful target language interactions with and among their students. This approach ensures true communication in the world language classroom, even at the novice level, and fosters the ability of the novice teacher to go "off script" (Sawyer, 2011).

250. From On-Site to Online: Making the Shift

Session: 8
Concourse: B

Transitioning from face-to-face courses to online courses is not just a matter of transferring material to your virtual learning environment and making it available. Teaching an online language course requires a new way of looking at purposeful design and development of the course. Our goal is to reach the same learning objectives as for our on-site classes, and therefore we need to find strategies that allow us to reach those goals in a virtual environment. The purpose of this presentation is to show the steps necessary for such a transition: selecting a traditional and/or OER text; creating/sourcing activities in the three modes; matching activities to the LMS capabilities; planning assessment types and frequency; weaving synchronous and asynchronous activities; and more. Examples will be drawn from existing online courses, and Q&A will be encouraged to allow participants to move ahead with their own transition to online teaching.

251. Coupling Proficiency and Engagement Through Technology

Session: 8
Concourse: E

Professionals in many fields use audio and video analysis to improve performance - so should language learners. This session will present audio and visual engagement techniques for foreign language teachers in elementary schools. The first part of the presentation will focus on establishing a video library of ACTFL Can-Do Statements, while the second part allows audience members to experience tools and techniques firsthand. The video library focuses on proficiency with ACTFL Can-Do Statements while maintaining a learner-centered community. Students are engaged in the library because it showcases their efforts while helping them improve their proficiency. Among traditional engagement techniques, we will discuss puppet shows, songs, and activities. We will also use assessment tools such as Quizlet and Kahoot.

252. Two Models for Content-Based L2 Instruction Through Media

Session: 8
Concourse: F

Studying media coverage involves analyzing ideologies, traditions, politics, religion, and social beliefs that change over time. This session focuses on two models of teaching media in advanced language classes in Russian and Hebrew. Both courses contain information on historical and structural overview of print, visual, and digital media. The Hebrew course is structured around thematic units, such as collective memory and media, while the Russian course integrates a module focused on conceptual metaphors in media production. Participants will learn how to implement advanced technology, encourage productive discussions, empower autonomous learning, and assess language and culture outcomes. Methodology and approaches are applicable to other languages.

254. Best of NH: Madame, Can we PLEASE read today?

Session: 9  Sutton South

Best of NH: This is a session about building a reading program that high school students truly enjoy, using children's books to teenage readers. Developed to accommodate my students, this program allowed for 10-20 minutes per week during classroom time. The session will discuss how to begin and will include classroom activities. This is easily adaptable to all languages.

Using authentic text in the world language classroom provides a cultural and linguistic context for our learners. Interacting with authentic text provides input to students and supports increasing their language proficiency. In this session, we will explore how to adapt tasks for authentic text to meet the needs of all learners across the proficiency continuum. We will do so by tiering — providing scaffolding and support for struggling learners and open-ended, more challenging tasks for advanced learners. We will also explore how to tier text on the same themes and create generic tasks that span the tiers.

256. Best of RI: HomeFUN — Engaging Students in Language Learning Outside of the Classroom

Session: 9  Regent

At best, students spend 60 minutes, five times a week in a world language classroom. For some students, only 30 minutes once a week are devoted to in-class language learning. For this reason, it is critical for world language educators to engage students in language learning outside of the classroom. The impetus behind homeFUN is to increase student time spent in the target language, which will lead to greater fluency. Attendees will learn how to help students fully embrace the idea of how fun language learning can be and to empower students to further their learning on their own. Rather than seeing homework as a drudgery and a chore, students will be begging for homeFUN! Attendees will learn how to set up interactive notebooks for students to practice with at home. They will learn how to design and maintain a website with blogs, games, videos, and other interactive features that encourage engagement. Other community involvement projects will also be explored.

257. Comprehensible Conversation

Session: 9  Beekman

What do students want from a world language class? They want to speak and to be understood in a new language. Teaching students to speak, however, can be challenging. Speaking, like all skills, must be developed through Comprehensible Input (CI) and engaging practice. This workshop will show a variety of activities I have borrowed, tweaked or developed that help students grow conversational skills using CI principles. These activities can be used in any WL class at any level. I give you the framework, you fill in the details according to your student’s proficiency level and curriculum goals. Let’s talk.

260. Integrating Teaching, Learning and Assessment Through Project-Based Instruction

Session: 9 Murray Hill West

This session discusses how collaborative, multi-literacy projects can be used effectively to enhance language proficiency. We will consider creative projects that integrate digital media skills with several modes of communication (such as interpretive reading, presentational speaking, and presentational writing). All projects have a strong civic engagement component, and can be carried out at the novice, intermediate, advanced, and/or superior levels. The session will also explore various instruments for measuring achievement and learner performance in said projects, including the ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines, the National Standards for 21st Century Language Learning, as well as other dynamic and process-oriented assessment techniques.

261. Mead Project: Creating a Sustainable Professional Support Program for World Language Teachers

Session: 9 Gramercy East

The focus of my Mead project was to create a system to provide collegial instructional support to world language teachers in the state of Vermont in accordance with the ACTFL Mentoring Program Guidelines. Session attendees will learn from my Mead journey, and learn steps to take to create an effective and sustainable system to provide instructional support to world language teachers in their school district or state — colleague to colleague. Whether it’s with a beginning language teacher, an experienced language teacher new to a school or district, or a singleton language teacher within a school or district, a supportive conversation with a colleague can be transformative — just the thing needed to keep a teacher from leaving the profession.

263. A Genre-Based Approach to the Three Modes of Communication

Session: 9 Clinton

Join us as we explore strategies to aid students in advancing their oral, written, and cultural proficiency as they navigate genre-based, writing-intensive courses in Spanish and Italian. The interpretive mode is based on authentic written and visual texts that generate substantive interpersonal discussion and lead to written and visual creations that emulate the analyzed models. Examples are drawn from courses that focus on, respectively, Darwin, crime writing, road movies, and Italian media and popular culture. Participants will come away with strategies and activities that are applicable to any language.

How do stereotypes hinder and yet promote a student’s acquisition of language? What function do they serve? These are just a few questions we will ponder in this workshop. “Paris, je t’aime” is an anthology of short films by eighteen directors which explore the connotations and symbolism behind French stereotypes while refuting them as well. This session will focus on three films in this collection that are appropriate for the high school classroom. We will look at a variety of activities that engage the students in rich discussions, enhance their knowledge of key grammatical structures, and promote expository and creative writing.

DESCRIBED OF ALL WORKSHOPS AND SESSIONS

265. Developing Students’ Intercultural Competence in the Foreign Language Classroom
Session: 9 Concourse A

Globalization has changed what citizens must know and be able to do by interrupting assumptions that the actions of citizens take place only within national borders. In response, world language teachers are rethinking what students need to learn and be able to do as members of an interdependent world. This workshop aims to provide participants with a framework of why Intercultural Competence Communication is crucial in a world language class and how teachers can incorporate tasks and activities in their classroom that allows students to develop an intercultural mindset. Also, participants will be shown examples of how to create assessments where intercultural competence aspects are taken into account. Finally, this workshop will discuss strategies for implementing student-centered learning activities that occur in and out of a school building, and which advance students’ cross-cultural learning and global mindedness.

Session: 9 Concourse E

Proficiency “Over Rules” is an instructional philosophy that embraces an authentic, communicative approach to instruction and assessments. Presenters will discuss the importance of developing teaching practices that promote contextualized instruction over grammar rules and rote practice. The components of this approach include departmental Organizing Principles; Can-Do Statements; communicative, student-centered lessons; introducing grammar as a concept; and Integrated Performance Assessments. Attendees will be provided with middle school-level samples of the components and suggestions for how to implement the approach.

268. Concept-Based Teaching for Effective Learning of Complex Language Features
Session: 9 Concourse F

Research has repeatedly shown that exposure to input alone is insufficient for second-language development. High-quality explicit instruction is necessary for full development, especially for complex language features (e.g., aspect, mood, word order, pragmatics). This session argues for the relevance of high-quality, meaning-based explicit instruction to maximize language development. We will present research-informed examples of effective pedagogical explanations and linked practice activities. Participants will explore ways of formulating explanations and designing practice activities for the languages they teach.

Session: 10 Murray Hill West

Are your students stuck in a language rut? Do you need a quick booster to help learners engage in tasks that will help them move forward with their proficiency? This session will briefly identify the ACTFL Proficiency levels, with ideas on the types of classroom activities and language tasks that target intermediate and advanced proficiency levels to help learners reach those language goals across the three modes of communication. Attendees will examine tasks against the ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines criteria and learn how to differentiate a task to use in the same classroom of learners.

<td>277.</td>
<td>277. Discover Paris with Jules Verne's &quot;Paris au XXe siècle&quot;</td>
<td>Would you like a different way to teach Paris? Then here is your opportunity. Jules Verne wrote &quot;Paris in the 20th Century&quot; in 1860, which was rejected by his editor for being too outlandish. He then put it in an old trunk, only for it to be found in 1989 by one of his descendants. The book, which has been published in both French and English, is an exciting way to teach Paris's transformation into the present. It is a way to study the changes of emphasis in education from the arts and language to technology. Visuals and audio will be incorporated into the presentation, as will lesson plan suggestions for upper-level French classes in both high school and college. A discussion of ideas is also welcome.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>278.</td>
<td>278. Teach in the Target Language Without Searing Your Students!</td>
<td>In this program, participants will take on the role of students in a French class. Even if participants do not have prior knowledge of French, that is OK! Attendees will participate in a variety of activities that make keeping 90% of instruction in the target language easy and engaging for both the teacher and the students. Throughout this program, we will explore ways in which our students can acquire a language in a natural way. At various points in the workshop, participants will have the opportunity to reflect upon each activity and strategy. We will then brainstorm (in small groups and with the whole group) ways in which we can apply each strategy and activity to various teaching situations. Participants will find that each activity and strategy can be tailored to meet the needs of students and teachers of all languages, ages, and levels. Finally, we will consider ways in which the target language can be used to address real life tasks and situations while incorporating technology.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>279.</td>
<td>279. Creating Connections Using the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals</td>
<td>In an increasingly interconnected world, the language class is uniquely positioned to introduce students to global issues, and to challenge them to see those issues from different perspectives, yet also understand how interconnected they are. In this session, we will share our experience addressing sustainability concerns, specifically using the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and The Earth Charter (EC). After a brief introduction to the SDGs, we will describe our experience using the SDGs as part of a thematic unit on designing hopeful futures. Participants will then work in pairs or small groups to identify different ways they could incorporate the SDGs in their curricula to create their own thematic units integrating language and critical thinking skills on global issues. The session will conclude with a whole group discussion of the challenges of discussing sustainability in a climate of disinformation campaigns.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>280.</td>
<td>280. Enriching World Language Competencies for the Professional World</td>
<td>In the United States, the growth of the Spanish language in settings such as health care, legal services, and business, and the increasing diversity of students enrolled in Spanish courses, reveal the importance of teaching Spanish for the professions. Therefore, this presentation will explore some of the challenges and opportunities that teaching courses such as Spanish for Criminal Justice, Spanish for Health Professionals, Spanish for Social Services, and Spanish for Business can offer to a more traditional curriculum. This presentation will also show how these courses can become a channel to real-world experiences, partnerships, and careers for students.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>281.</td>
<td>281. STARTALK Principles: A Pathway to Linguistic, Intercultural and Global Competence</td>
<td>This session presents a case study of a STARTALK Summer Program for high school/college students supported by implementation of the STARTALK- endorsed Principles for effective language teaching and learning. The case study highlights how application of planning, instructional and assessment strategies aligned with the Principles promotes the development of higher levels of linguistic proficiency, as well as intercultural and global competencies.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>282.</td>
<td>282. A Hybrid L2 Pronunciation Approach: Online Tools Plus Traditional Techniques</td>
<td>Achieving native-like pronunciation in a second language presents a lingering obstacle for many students. While in-person instruction and practice remain integral to the L2 acquisition process, various free-to-use online resources are available as supplementary materials. In our presentation, we advocate a hybrid approach to improving pronunciation, utilizing both high-tech tools and tangible techniques. We describe the use of sites like Forvo.com to incorporate examples of native pronunciation and we explain how the University of Iowa's phonetics tools and PRAAT, a speech analysis program, can allow students to analyze their own pronunciation. We describe specific activities that engage these resources in the classroom and outside it.</td>

283. The Cultural Landscapes of the Rhine River

Session: 10  Concourse E

Perhaps one of the best known waterways in Europe, the Rhine is significant not only for its role in international industrial transportation, but also for the cultural wealth and beauty of the surrounding area. On its banks, many famous cities and historical landmarks are located, including Vaduz, Basel, Mainz, Cologne, Düsseldorf, the Dragon’s Rock, and the Lorelei cliff. In this session, we first provide a refresher on general knowledge of the Rhine before focusing on a few less-known facts that may serve as a basis for classroom instruction, highlighting some possible STEM-related topics. We then get acquainted with authentic video material that spotlights the cultures and the stunning beauty of the Middle Rhine Valley, part of which is recognized by UNESCO as a World Heritage Center. The videos are readily available on the Internet, and some are accompanied by downloadable worksheets and exercises, free of cost. We end by exploring some audio-material that can easily be used in the DaF-classroom.

284. Multilingual Classics Recitation

Session: 10  Concourse F

Have you wondered why a toddler asks to read the same book repeatedly? Do you think rote learning is out-of-date? Have you noticed the linkage between good memory and high academic performance? This session introduces you to Chinese classics recitation, a traditional method that has been in practice for thousands of years to teach children Chinese. Although weak in ability to comprehend, young children possess strong memory power. Classics recitation takes advantage of this memory and teaches children languages effectively. The co-presenters currently use this method to teach Chinese in their respective schools. This method is readily applicable to learning any other languages. The presenters will introduce you to the theory behind the method and show examples of class videos. An interactive hands-on learning and an open discussion will be conducted. Participants will leave this session equipped with the knowledge and the tools to incorporate classics recitation at school or at home.

2018 NECTFL Awards

THE NORTHEAST CONFERENCE BROOKS AWARD
FOR OUTSTANDING LEADERSHIP IN THE PROFESSION
Janis Hennessy, Dover High School (NH), Retired

Janis Hennessey has been a tireless advocate for world languages throughout her stellar career. She initiated innovative teaching techniques to engage her students; mentored young teachers; worked with the New Hampshire Board of Education to develop teacher certification requirements and state world language standards; served as president of NHAWL T; and spearheaded successful statewide conferences, including NHAWL T’s 50th anniversary. Devoted to promoting language study, Janis has offered countless workshops and written more than a dozen children’s books, five of which are in French. As one of her colleagues stated: “For over four decades, Janis Hennessey has made the celebration of world language teachers, students, and programs her priority. She is the symbol of what a supportive leader and promoter of world language throughout the state of New Hampshire and elsewhere should be.”

THE NORTHEAST CONFERENCE JAMES W. DODGE
FOREIGN LANGUAGE ADVOCATE AWARD
The Trout Gallery, Dickinson College, Carlisle, PA

The Trout Gallery, the art museum of Dickinson College, offers nearly 100 world language programs in Spanish, French, Japanese, German and Portuguese to its world language students as well as students from local schools and the community. From French Impressionism to the Italian Renaissance to the works of Mexican printmaker José Guadalupe Posada, the Trout has given students and community members the opportunity to experience art in their language or the language they are learning. As a Trout supporter said: “The work The Trout Gallery executes proves to be important and effective as it bridges communities together one tour at a time.”

“Integration PCK: Modeling the Knowledge(s) Underlying a World Language Teacher’s Implementation of CBI”, Foreign Language Annals, Volume 50, Issue 2, Summer 2017, pp. 458–476

This extremely well-researched article centers on understanding the knowledge embedded in a world language teacher’s enactment of content-based instruction (CBI) through the lens of a theoretical model inspired by Shulman’s 1987 construct of pedagogical content knowledge (PCK). The model represents an adaptation of PCK that explicitly addresses the expanded set of content knowledge teachers need to effectively implement CBI. Findings suggest the model can inform the work of language teacher education and professional development focused on CBI.

The Seal of Biliteracy for Vermont and Beyond
We observe that the majority of states that have yet to implement the Seal of Biliteracy are rural, have small populations, and lack ethnic diversity, similar to our state of Vermont. These states face unique challenges for a variety of reasons. Our goal is to achieve approval for the Seal of Biliteracy in Vermont and to provide a roadmap for other homogenous, rural states to follow in implementing the Seal.

We have researched what other states have done to gain approval and recognize that our next goal is to demonstrate to stakeholders such as parents and students that having a Seal of Biliteracy on their grade transcript is meaningful. Once students move beyond the confines of Vermont, they will realize that ethnic and lingual diversity is the norm in many areas of our country.

After test driving the Seal in our own school district, we will begin publicizing the opportunity to other school districts and invite our state legislature to approve it at the state level. We plan to use our state language organization (VFLA) as a vehicle for communication. We will contact every school district and offer them the process that we utilized, and invite our state legislature to approve the opportunity to other school districts.

Building Professional Networks of World Language Educators
Overwhelmed yet passionate, disconnected yet excited, unsure yet willing; these are the common internal battles one fights as a new teacher. It is our responsibility as experienced teachers to alleviate some of these burdens and to help new members of the World Language community grow. Building professional connections amongst world language educators will improve teacher retention and teaching, teacher satisfaction, and help to forward the world language profession. During the next year, we will work to create a network of educators, and will offer professional platforms, workshops and mentoring to novice teachers, and those interested in teaching or studying to be teachers. It is especially important for new teachers, early in their careers, to connect to other professionals, to learn about best practices, to build a personal learning community, and to begin the work of continuing their own language studies. Helping novice teachers build these communities as they begin their careers is integral not only to their success but also to the profession. This type of support is also critical for high school students interested in pursuing a career as a World Language teacher or for those who are studying the profession.

Amanda Robustelli-Price is a teacher of French at Enfield High School in Enfield CT.
Gina Gallo is a teacher of Spanish and Italian at Bristol Central High School in Bristol, CT.

Dr. Celia Chomón Zamora, GWATFL

Synchronous Computer-Mediated Communication as a Language Learning Tool in the Secondary Foreign Language Classroom
Utilizing technology to facilitate foreign language learning in the classroom is not a recent trend, particularly as a way to bring exposure of the target language from native speakers to the students in typical Face-to-Face (FTF) classroom environments. To address this issue, this project proposal attempts to address the following: a) Is synchronous computer-mediated communication (SCMC) is feasible to accomplish and incorporate in a high school foreign language classroom? b) Are there any discernible improvements in the students’ fluency and proficiency levels from using Tele tandem/SCMC compared to traditional FTF classrooms?

The project will provide new opportunities and leadership abilities at various levels of language education by affording students that are unable to fund a study-abroad experience (which has been shown by research to help with fluency and rich language immersion) to have a modified and affordable study-abroad experience. This therefore affords schools in varying degrees of affluence and resources to be able to work together to improve the levels of multilingualism and multiculturalism not just in their students, but in their faculty.

Dr. Celia Chomón Zamora is foreign language department chair at the Oakcrest School in Vienna, VA.

About the Award
This scholarship is provided to support an individual in the development of a project that contributes to the foreign language teaching profession and advances quality language instruction. The Mead program was created to develop future leaders for the profession at the state, regional, and national levels. It is supported in part by SANS, Inc., and we are grateful to the company for their contributions to our profession and to NECTFL. Educators of ALL LANGUAGES at ALL LEVELS are encouraged to apply to this program, designed to identify potential leaders in education and to support the development of their potential. Each scholarship recipient will be assigned a mentor with expertise in the area of that person’s project, and NECTFL will facilitate virtual and, if possible, face-to-face meetings of the two.
Whether her students are performing puppet shows or rescuing monarch butterflies, Rebecca Aubrey, the CT COLT Language Teacher of the Year, is known for the “dynamic and exciting ways” her teaching integrates language and culture. Rebecca gets to know each student’s interests and needs, and offers a variety of learning options that build language, cultural competency, and 21st Century skills. Her principal describes her as having “a unique ability and unlimited perseverance in connecting with and motivating her students”, particularly those who are most at-risk. Rebecca leads her colleagues by guiding curriculum development, hosting site visits, and presenting at state and national conferences.

Estefania Becker, awarded Teacher of the Year by the Delaware Council for the Teaching of Foreign Languages, is a passionate and creative professional who believes students deserve to be immersed daily in the target language to be able to compete in today’s world. She engages her students consistently in the Spanish language by having them interpret information from authentic materials, collaborate in the language, and make cultural comparisons. Estefania is an integral member and past Board Chair of the Delaware World Language Teacher Leader Network whose insight and leadership are contagious and inspiring to her colleagues. She brings a wealth of knowledge and enthusiasm and is dedicated to bringing the best to the world language teaching profession.

Frank A. Campione, J.D., Professor of Italian on the high school and college level and the FLENJ Teacher of the Year is know for immersing his students in the Italian language and culture. Frank creates lessons designed to motive the most reluctant learner and provide students with "real-life experiences" that develop both character and self-esteem. As Professor says, "you cannot teach a foreign language without learning about its culture." In addition to serving as a positive role model, Professor strives to instill in his students a love of learning to enable students to succeed in life, by utilizing lessons that reflect the eight intelligences.

Cindi Hodgdon, representing the New Hampshire Association of World Language Teachers, is a German teacher known for engaging students both in and out of the classroom. Her students are often visiting the local nursing home, performing in festivals, and competing in national competitions. She combines innovation and high standards inside the classroom to push her students to be their best. She is passionate about connecting colleagues around the state, region, and country. As one of her colleagues noted, “It is impossible to be in a room with Cindi and not want to jump on board, dig in and work harder. She makes everyone around her better. Cindi’s enthusiasm for her craft is infectious, she is enthusiastic and dedicated.”

Xiaoyan Hu, the Rhode Island Foreign Language Association Teacher of the Year, enjoys the challenge of creating curricula and learning experiences for Chinese learners of all ages and levels, who she has taught in a variety of settings, from weekend heritage school to K-12 after school program to university-level. Currently she is the Academic Director of the URI Chinese Flagship Program, a program for students in any major to achieve Superior proficiency in Chinese that culminates with a Capstone Year of study and internship in China. To prepare her students for this experience, she centers her passion for educating the whole learner through authentic, task-based teaching methods in the classroom, and individualized mentoring and advising outside of the classroom.

Sheena Jordan, of the Greater Washington Association of Teachers of Foreign Language has been edifying young minds in foreign language for over 17 years. She’s taught Spanish in the most challenging schools in DC, Maryland, and Virginia. However, with each experience, Sheena always rises to the challenge, keeping the priority of “leading with language” as her focus: never underestimating her scholars. Sheena commits to making global connections with her students, supporting social justice movements like #CaribbeanSchoolsRise. Sheena believes, language is a portal to problem-solving; by teaching language we’re preparing our children to create the resolutions to initiate our future revolutions.

Cherie Garrett, the Pennsylvania State Modern Language Association Teacher of the Year, is an exemplary world language instructor who shares her passion for Spanish language and culture with her students, her colleagues and with the community. Cherie has developed and advised numerous world language programs and events not only in her school district, but also at the state and international level. Her commitment to a student-centered classroom that exclusively uses the target language accompanied by innovative and engaging teaching methodologies have led to the numerous successes of her students who frequently study abroad or acquire jobs where they use Spanish or interact with people of different cultures.

Barbara Sharbaugh, Maryland Foreign Language Association Teacher of the Year, demonstrates professionalism and exemplary instruction through her many roles as language educator, mentor, facilitator, and presenter. Barbara is a life-long learner dedicated to her students and colleagues. She demonstrates passion for developing the academic and personal strengths of all students and supporting and retaining language educators. Barbara envisions students interacting with the world as globally competent citizens. Her focus is to empower teachers and students to continually grow and be a voice for students while advocating the importance and relevance of language study for all learners in the 21st century.

General Information
Since 2000, the NECTFL Review has published articles of interest to instructors, researchers, and administrators at all educational levels on theory, research, and classroom practice in language teaching. In addition to scholarly articles, the NECTFL Review includes reviews of products of interest to foreign language educators. These evaluations are written by language professionals at all levels representing all languages. In 2005, the Review was available both online and in hard copy. In 2009, the NECTFL Review was published uniquely online, maintaining the same professional rigor in the selection and publication of articles that had seen the journal take its place among the ranks of highly recognized foreign language publications. The journal is published twice a year: in March and in September. There is no deadline for submission of articles.

Guidelines for the preparation of manuscripts and a checklist for manuscript preparation are published in every issue of the journal and also appear in full online at http://www.nectfl.org/publications/:

- Guidelines for Preparation of Manuscripts
- A Checklist for Manuscript Preparation
- Author/Article Information

Each article is reviewed by at least three nationally-known experts in the field of foreign language teaching who make up the Editorial Board and reviewers. Elements that are considered in the evaluation process are the article’s appropriateness for the journal’s readership; its contribution to foreign language education and the originality of that contribution; the soundness of the research or theoretical base; its implications for the classroom; and finally, organization, focus, and clarity of expression.

Authors are normally notified about the status of their articles within two months from the date of submission.

For those interested in reviewing materials, contact Tom Conner, Review Editor, tom.conner@snc.edu

Guidelines for reviewers can be found at http://www.nectfl.org/publications/

A Message from the 2019 Chair

Dear NECTFL friends and colleagues,

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to the 2018 Northeast Conference. As the chair for the 65th conference, I would like to elicit your support in making the event meaningful and supportive of our work in K-16 classrooms. The conference will be held at the New York Hilton Midtown from February 7–9, 2019. The theme, Authentic Language, Authentic Learning, reflects the intent of the World Readiness Standards for Learning Languages and the NCCSFL/ACTFL Can-Do Statements, 2017. Authentic teaching and learning in the 21st century world language classroom foster “world-ready” citizens who communicate effectively with cultural understanding.

Laura Terrill, who is known nationally for her work in the field of world languages, will be the keynote speaker. Laura taught French at all levels for 21 years before becoming Coordinator of Foreign Language and English as a Second Language and then, Director of Curriculum. She has taught methods courses in St. Louis and in Indianapolis and continues to present at the local, state, regional, and national levels. She recently worked as a content specialist for the National Foreign Language Resource Center working with the STARTALK program. She has served on the Board of Directors for Central States and ACTFL. Laura is the recipient of the Founders Award for Central States, has been named as the NADSFL District Supervisor of the Year, and was honored with the ACTFL Florence Steiner Award for Leadership. She recently co-authored the Second Edition of ACTFL Keys to Planning for Learning: Effective Curriculum, Unit and Lesson Design. I am confident that Laura will inspire and inform us.

I urge you to take an active role in the conference by proposing a session, one that aligns with the conference theme, that deals with research studies, that showcases technology integration, or one that would be of general interest to participants. Proposals can be submitted at: http://www.nectfl.org/conference/.

Please enjoy your 2018 NECTFL Conference experience and I hope that we will see you once again for the 2019 Northeast Conference.

Best wishes,

Rosanne
