WHEN: March 7-10, 2013

WHERE: Marriott Waterfront on the Harbor in Baltimore — The hotel and all its amenities will belong to us! And you’ll be within walking (or water taxi!!!) distance of hundreds of restaurants, clubs, museums, shopping, walking trails, and gorgeous views.

WHAT’S THE SAME?: Our time-honored outstanding Program of sessions and workshops; our diverse and friendly Exhibitors; our nationally-recognized responsiveness and informality; but also — Preconference Reports and Webinars; Postconference Programming to help you keep the momentum; and “Voluntourism” so we can give back to Baltimore!

WHAT’S NEW?: Partnering with our ESOL Colleagues, and special programs for students, new teachers, and retirees!

Baltimore is more than big city flash with small town friendliness. It’s more than the best crabcakes in the world! It’s more than the home of our national anthem and our National Aquarium.

It was one of the largest “freed” communities in the country when slavery was still legal and it was the second largest port of entry for immigrants after Ellis Island. People from around the world have settled here, as reflected in festivals, monuments, traditions, neighborhoods and other cultural expressions. Baltimore has eleven sister cities in Egypt, Spain, Israel, Liberia, Italy, Japan, Greece, the Netherlands, China, and Ukraine. You’re going to love it!

Arlene F. White, Salisbury University, Conference Chair

Follow the Signs to Our Exhibit Hall
Make sure you visit the 150+ friendly Exhibitor booths and table tops in the Exhibit Areas. Examine books, software, language labs, international gifts, immersion and travel programs. We will also have a “Northeast Cafe” for coffee and lunch.

Conference Tip!

Get out into the city!
Ask someone at the Hospitality Desk to recommend free Baltimore activities or to point out inexpensive restaurants. Go see a foreign film — even if movie tickets are more expensive in a big city than in your home town, a movie is still cheaper than many other forms of evening entertainment. Use the subway — it’s a great way to get around.
Dear Northeast Conference Participants,

Welcome to the 59th annual Northeast Conference, to the Marriott Waterfront Hotel, and to Baltimore!

We sincerely hope that you have a personally and professionally rewarding experience over the next few days. For our part, we shall do our best to live up to our reputation as associations committed to responsive leadership, outstanding professional development and support for the community of world language educators.

Over the course of the next few days, you will have the chance to participate in some familiar and enriching activities …

• Visit the exhibit areas from 12-1 p.m., 3:15-4 p.m., and 5:15-6 p.m. Saturday, as well as from 8:30 a.m. and 12-2 p.m. Sunday - or any other time you are free!

• Attend as many as ten sessions by our profession’s “legends” and by up-and-coming presenters with a new take on what happens in the classroom.

• Enjoy a variety of catered events such as receptions, coffee services, and meals provided by the amazing chefs, banquet managers, and servers at the Marriott Waterfront.

• Network with familiar and new friends.

• Get out on the town with native Baltimoreans in the evening - restaurants, museums, cinemas, clubs, concert halls, ethnic neighborhoods.

… but you’ll also find a number of innovations!

• A “global identity” focus for each conference day.

• A job fair area with exhibitors who are hiring.

• The Wall of Recognition with photos and moving tributes written by teachers to honor individuals who have had an impact on their lives and careers.

• The Silent Auction where you can bid on a beautifully packaged bottle of wine, unique pieces of jewelry, useful and attractive ceramic pieces, baskets of gifts from our state associations, and more!

• An evening film series for those who prefer to stay in!

• Smart mobs and flash mobs!

This year, we are delighted to renew the NECTFL/MFLA/GWATFL partnership. Please thank our Local Committee members who are helping with both hospitality and session evaluation. We encourage everyone to join his or her state association and to support all their initiatives on behalf of world language teachers and learners.

We have also been treated royally by the Marriott Waterfront Hotel. I encourage you to send your praise and thanks for good service you observe to the Hotel’s General Manager, Ed Rudzinski (Marriott Waterfront Hotel, 700 Aliceanna St., Baltimore MD 21202).

It is both an honor and privilege to serve as your 2012 Conference Chair. Please do not hesitate to approach me when you see me in Baltimore—to provide me with feedback, to make a suggestion, or just to say hi!

Warmly,
Jennie Steeley
2012 NECTFL Conference Chair
French teacher, Manheim Township Middle School
Lancaster, PA
Whatever your role in our profession—teacher, administrator, researcher, program director, adviser, association leader, consultant—you are also a life-long learner.

You know how it feels to have been inspired, challenged, cared for, or encouraged by an educator.

You know how it feels to have earned someone’s respect, overcome someone’s disappointment in you, or completely surprised someone by exceeding expectations.

You know who deserves your gratitude … who should be remembered and honored … who would be truly thrilled to discover what he or she meant to you.

NECTFL believes in the power of teachers. But we know that individual teachers are not always recognized or honored as they should be. We know that making a difference in someone’s life isn’t always a flashy process that attracts attention.

Starting at the 2012 Northeast Conference and continuing virtually on the NECTFL website thereafter, a special Wall of Recognition will be created to celebrate those who have mentored, inspired and taught all of us.

Each honoree will be represented on the Wall by a photo and a tribute written by the nominator.

Honorees will be memorialized if they are no longer with us and honored as living legends if they are!

All honorees able to be present will be recognized, with their nominators, at our Saturday, April 21, evening Awards Ceremony in the Waterview Ballroom on the first floor of the hotel. The Wall with all photos and tributes will be displayed throughout the Conference.

TWO GREAT ADDITIONS TO THE NORTHEAST CONFERENCE!

THE FIRST ANNUAL “WALL OF RECOGNITION”

The FIRST Annual NECTFL Silent Auction will take place on Saturday and Sunday from 9:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. in the area next to the escalator on 4th level of The Marriott Waterfront Hotel. Each day will have different items available. Catalogues of the items are available in the auction area. Baskets from many of the states representing the Northeast region will be on display and available for bidding. Throughout the day, we encourage you to visit the area often to view the items offered and to make your bids.

Winners will be contacted via their cell phone so it is important to include that information on the bid sheet in a legible manner. At 5:00 p.m. each day, the highest bidders will be notified by phone. They will be asked to go to the registration desk on the 4th level to pay for the item with cash, check or credit card. They will then bring the receipt to the auction area and claim their item(s). After 30 minutes, if the item is not claimed, it will go to the next highest bidder.

The Marriott Business Office, located on the 3rd level, is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday if you wish to mail anything home. On Sunday, you may leave the package with the Concierge in the main lobby and it will be mailed on Monday.

All proceeds from the auction will benefit the professional development opportunities that the conference offers.

MAKE A BID AT THE FIRST ANNUAL SILENT AUCTION AND TAKE HOME AN ITEM YOU DIDN’T EXPECT TO FIND AT NECTFL!

Earrings for when you teach Le petit Prince…

2012 Northeast Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages Annual Award for Outstanding Leadership in the Profession, given in memory of Nelson H. Brooks: RICHARD D. BRECHT

Richard D. Brecht is currently the Executive Director of the Center for Advanced Study of Language at the University of Maryland (the first government-funded University Associated Research Center devoted to language), where he has led since its founding in 2003. It is with admiration, gratitude, and respect that the Northeast Conference presents its prestigious Brooks Award to Dick Brecht. In addition to supporting associations like ours, Dr. Brecht has interacted with myriad individuals in myriad contexts — governmental, academic, professional, commercial, and cultural — to ensure mutual understanding between language teachers and those whose decisions affect their lives. As we confer this honor on Richard D. Brecht, we honor again his memory of his long-time collaborator and, to use Dr. Brecht’s own term, “the left side of his brain.” A Ronald Walton — himself the recipient of the Brooks in 1997. How fitting that they should both be recognized for leadership whose impact they each credited largely to the other’s inspiration!

Congratulations, Dick, and please enjoy this tribute from Dr. Benjamin Rifkin whose admiration for you is shared by all at NCFL and who knew best how to put that admiration into words.

A TRIBUTE TO RICHARD D. BRECHT
By Benjamin Rifkin

Imagine a young man graduating from the Pennsylvania State University in the mid-1960s with a degree in Russian. Even knowing that he was graduating summa cum laude, even knowing that he would go on to complete his PhD in Slavic linguistics at Harvard, one would be hard pressed to predict that such a young man would go on to have an impact on national language policy at all levels in the U.S. But this young man was Richard (“Dick”) Brecht. After completing his doctoral degree, Dick went on to faculty positions at Cornell, Harvard, and the University of Maryland, his primary academic home for the past 25 years. He has taught and mentored countless students who have gone on to great work across the United States. Dick’s greatest professional impact can be seen in two intersecting aspects of his work: scholarship and leadership.

As a scholar, he is the author, co-author, editor, or co-editor of 12 books, seven reports or manuals, and author or co-author of over 50 articles or book chapters. Some scholars have a narrowly defined field of interest, but not Dick Brecht. His published work spans all four models of scholarship as described by Ernest Boyer (1997).

Among his research projects in the area of the scholarship of discovery, Dick edited volumes on cultural pragmatics, case in Slavic, Russian and Slavic morphosyntax; his refereed articles treat aspects of Slavic, Russian, and other typological types, voice marking in Russian, form and function of aspect in Russian, just to name a few. Boyer also provides for the scholarship of teaching, in which scholars discover or analyze the ways in which students learn. Dick may well have been the case study for this model of scholarship. His published projects include not only contributions to textbooks, including Russian Stage 2, but also research articles on study abroad, including, for example, a paper co-authored with Dan Davidson and Ralph Ginsburg entitled “Predictors of Language Gain during Study Abroad.” Published in 1995, it remains relevant and important today.

The category of scholarship of integration involves scholarship in which the scholar creates new knowledge by synthesizing and making connections across disciplines: here, too, Dick excelled, with papers and volumes spanning the fields of second language acquisition, applied linguistics, and the study of language education. Boyer describes the scholarship of application as the efforts of scholars to bridge the gap between theory and practice through research and action. Dick’s impact has been greatest in this realm, through his congressional testimony and his papers and presentations on national language capacity, national language policy, heritage language learning, the needs of the LCTLs, the importance of language for national security (understood broadly), and the nature and outcomes of language study. His excellence in this area is also reflected in his extraordinary work in funded grant projects including the Center for Advanced Study of Language, LangNet (the National Language Network), ELLIAS (an on-line system for the evaluation of Title VI and Fullbright-Hays programs), and many more.

Dick’s work in the scholarship of application blends seamlessly with his leadership, not only in the Russian field, but in the modern languages more generally. He was a founder of the American Council of Russian (ACTR), the American Council for Collaboration in Education and Language Study (ACCELS), and the American Councils for International Education. But he was also a principal founder for Project ICONS (International Communication and Negotiation Simulations), the National Foreign Language Center (NFLC), the National Council of Organizations of Less Commonly Taught Languages (which has since evolved into the National Council of Less Commonly Taught Languages), and numerous others. He has held leadership positions on boards for entities ranging from the Defense Language Institute Foreign Language Center and the National African Language Resource Center to the University of Wisconsin-Madison and the Joint National Committee for Languages (JNCL), and on several editorial boards. Journalists have cited him in newspapers and magazines, including The New York Times and Pravda. He has given several hundred refereed and invited scholarly and professional lectures at conferences and universities. He has also taken leadership roles in organizing conferences, including the National Language Conference in 2004 and the Heritage Language Conferences in 1999 and 2001. Dick has participated in program reviews and consultations with government agencies, federal professionals, legislators, staff in government agencies, and leaders in the postsecondary and non-profit worlds.

Dick has been honored by a number of scholarly associations: the ACTR, AATSEEL, and the International Association of Teachers of Russian Language and Literature, but also Omicron Delta Kappa (the National Leadership Honor Society), NCFLC, the African Language Teachers Association, the National Council of Associations of Chinese Language Schools, and the National Council of Secondary Teachers of Japanese. Yes, Dick Brecht is a nationally prominent Slavist who has won awards from teachers of African languages, Chinese, and Japanese!

Indeed, the list of Dick’s accomplishments is as long as it is deep and we honor him for all of them as well as for his extraordinary warmth and devotion not only to his field but also to the people with whom he works to support that field. Our professional lives have been forever changed for the better thanks to Richard Brecht and the vision, drive, and passion he has shared with us in his scholarship and leadership over the span of his extraordinary career.

2012 Northeast Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages James W. Dodge Memorial Foreign Language Advocate Award, given outside the profession in recognition of work on behalf of languages: J. DAVID EDWARDS

Dr. J. David Edwards is currently Executive Director of the Joint National Committee for Languages and the National Council for Languages and International Studies, representing sixty-five scholarly and professional associations concerned with languages and international education. Ed Edwards is a past Chairman of the Council of Washington Representatives, a charter member of the American League of Lobbyists, a former Trustee of the International Development Conference, and a founder of the English Plus Information Clearinghouse. He has served on a number of Advisory Boards, such as the National Security Education Program, the National Capitol Area Language Resource Center and the President’s Leadership Council. Prior to JNCL, David worked for the Government Executive Institute training senior federal executives in legislative affairs. In fact, he designed a simulation of the hearing process that is still in use. A former Program Director for one of the nation’s oldest education associations, he first came to Washington as a Research Associate for a State Department “think tank” where he produced books on Cuba, Venezuela, and Colombia. With a Ph.D. in government and foreign affairs from the University of Virginia, Dr. Edwards has taught at Loyola University, West Virginia Tech, Trinity College, and the University of Virginia. The author of numerous books, dozens of articles and myriad keynote addresses and other speeches on international relations and national policy (his range is illustrated with merely three titles: “Lost in Translation: A Review of the Federal Government’s Efforts to Develop a Foreign Language Strategy,” “The English Only Paradox,” and “The Classics and Public Advocacy”), he has served as a consultant on education, human rights, and international affairs. He has been interviewed frequently by media outlets such as the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, CNN, VOA and more.

He is a recipient of the Central States Conference’s Paul Simon Award and the New York Association’s Presidential Award. In 1994, he received a prestigious Andrew W. Mellon Fellowship to Johns Hopkins University’s Institute for Advanced Studies where he became a national authority on education reform. In 2005, Dr. Edwards was recognized for 25 years of service to the House/Senate International Education Study Group which he helped create. In 2008, he was the lead author on the definitive article on National Language Policies: Pragmatism, Process and Products. In April 2011, he was awarded the A. Ronald Walton Award in recognition of distinguished service on behalf of the Less Commonly-Taught Languages.

It is a distinct honor for the Northeast Conference to have this means for acknowledging Dr. Edwards’ unique and brilliant work on behalf of all world language professionals. For longer than any other serving Executive Director in our field, Dave Edwards has made tangible his undying commitment to ensure that all Americans know and can use their native language and at least one other. The full implications of this mission are far more complex than most people realize. They have required that Dave demonstrate expertise in the areas of pedagogy, education, sociology, government, the military, diplomacy, non-profit management, history, culture, and language. They have required that Dave deploy skills in the interpersonal, presentational, and interpretive realms as he engages with a broad range of constituents. They have required that Dave hone his natural dispositions toward intellectual curiosity, broad-mindedness, a passion for civil rights and access, the refusal to judge.

In conferring the Dodge Award on J. David Edwards, NECTFL notes the number of previous recipients whose advocacy we came to know thanks to the work, the acumen and the loyalty Dave has shown us for 30 years, including Leon Panetta, Christopher Dodd, Claiborne Pell, David Boren, Richard Riley, Ann Copland, and Rush Holt. Our debt could not be greater, and we thank Dave and congratulate him warmly on this honor.

We know that Dave enjoys this tribute by former JNCL-NCLIS president, Jayne Abrate, Executive Director of the American Association of Teachers of French.

I knew who J. David Edwards was well before I met him. When I applied to become Executive Director of the AATF, the late Senator Paul Simon was on the verge of retirement and planning to start a public policy institute at Southern Illinois University. I thought it would be a coup if I could get a letter of recommendation from Senator Simon for my application. I stopped by his local office and asked. In a few short days, I had a letter supporting my application and the move of the AATF Headquarters to SIU from the University of Illinois. Unbeknownst to me, Senator Simon had consulted his sources about me, one of whom was Dave, who used his own network to find out about me.

As I later met and worked closely with him as a Board Member and then President of JNCL-NCLIS, I was always impressed with his grasp of the issues, his expert knowledge of the legislative process, and his devotion to the language profession. How ironic that the biggest champion of the study of languages is monolingual, but perhaps that is as it should be. Since he has no personal allegiance to any one language, he has supported us wholeheartedly.

As Dave has repeatedly reminded us, languages are a bi-partisan issue. Despite the fact that languages are often given short shrift, Dave had a personal hand in and guided us through the legislative process that resulted in the Centers for International Business Education and Research (CIBERs), the Foreign Language Assistance Program (FLAP), the National Security Education Program (NSEP), and the National Foreign Language Resource Centers (NFLRCs). This is a remarkable achievement in a business where even one significant piece of legislation in a career is more the norm. Furthermore, this does not take into account all the smaller, but no less important, successes such as changes to wording in legislation from language to languages or in referencing a list of “critical languages” that is nearly all inclusive. He taught us as a profession that there is a difference between advocacy and public relations and how to lobby effectively, knowledge that delegate carry back with them and implement successfully in local legislative efforts. He has always told us that “we are the experts;” but Dave is the legislative expert who made us effective advocates of our professional expertise.

For 32 years, Dave has managed to corral a diverse and sometimes cantankerous language profession, with its individual interests and potentially conflicting priorities. He has led us to build consensus around attainable goals that have greatly enriched the field. In order to be our voice, he has listened, questioned, digested, and reflected on our views in a way that sharpened and unified our goals. His stewardship of JNCL-NCLIS has been wholehearted, farsighted, and yet realistic. Dave has never been interested in doing anything just for show. He has focused on getting results, and his record speaks for itself.

When Dave became Executive Director of JNCL-NCLIS, he took over a fledgling association that was floundering through a lack of direction. He built it, often at great personal sacrifice, into a coalition of over 60 associations that should serve as a model for how to get things done in Washington on a shoestring.

The list of members of Congress, former and current, who came to rely on Dave’s input over the years is truly impressive. Perhaps Dave’s greatest legacy will turn out to be the wonderful staff people he has hired, worked with, and mentored. A teacher at heart, he turned the work of JNCL-NCLIS into a training ground for talented young people. Their enthusiasm and intelligence and his thoughtful mentoring has benefited our profession and at the same time opened the doors to a wider professional world for those who worked for him.

A lobbyist can influence legislators and policymakers in one of two ways, with a lot of money or with worthy ideas. And if you have only ideas, you had better speak truthfully and knowledgeably. The respect with which members of Congress and staff of both parties have spoken of Dave over the years is again testimony to the high professional and ethical standards with which he has done his job. Dave has undoubtedly had input into more decisions, hearings, and deliberations than we will ever know.

In recent years, the term lobbyist has sometimes become synonymous with corruption and undue influence of the legislative process. However, my view of a lobbyist has always been influenced by Dave, and I believe that the majority of lobbyists, particularly those without access to unlimited funding, are educators. Their job is to educate legislators on the value and impact of legislation. Dave has done so with honesty, integrity, and perseverance, and I am honored to call him a friend.

2012 Northeast Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages Teacher of the Year: Lucy Chu Lee

Lucy Lee has been such an unstintingly generous contributor to the Northeast Conference — presenting workshops and sessions, encouraging others to attend, helping to attract exhibitors, sharing ideas and responding to requests for advice, and always being available while maintaining a profile of humility and a demeanor of optimism and good cheer. NECTFL Board and staff members cannot imagine a Northeast Conference without her, and given all she does for our profession, it is incredible to come to know her also as a teacher worthy of representing our entire profession!

It is our pleasure and our great honor to have Lucy Chu Lee serve as the face of NECTFL in our profession for the coming year and to move forward to the national level at the upcoming 2012 ACTFL convention in Philadelphia with the other four regional associations Teachers of the Year.

We share this honor with the colleagues and associations who nominated her with praise, gratitude, and awe:

“… her name is practically synonymous with CLASS… (and she is a ‘class act’!)”
Over the years, Ms. Lee has played an influential role in the growth of Chinese language education in the United States. She has served two terms as president of the Chinese Language Association of Secondary-Elementary Schools (CLASS) and served on the Board of Directors for the Chinese Language Teachers Association (CLTA). She led the CLASS Fulbright Summer Study Abroad Programs in China as the Project Director in both 2002 and 2004. Ms. Lee has also been an assessment specialist for the College Board SAT II Chinese Test and is presently an AP consultant for the AP Chinese test. She has served on a variety of professional committees including the National Standards for Foreign Language Collaborative Project, AAPPL Leadership Team and Advisory Committee, ACTFL Assessment Grant Advisory Committee, SOPA Online Training Panel committee, and the Center for Applied Linguistics (CAL) WOPA-C Course Project.

Ms. Lee is very active in the foreign language profession; she has presented many workshops for national, regional and state conferences. As an executive board member of the Foreign Language Educators of New Jersey (FLENJ) since 2000, she has worked to promote the teaching and learning of world languages through the student podcast contest. Ms. Lee served two years on the National Commission for the AP World Languages Course and Exam Review Project. She was appointed to serve on the New Jersey International Education Taskforce and served three years on the National Chinese Language Commission for a Luce Foundation Project on the Chinese Language Field Initiative. Ms. Lee is a past board member of the National Council of Organizations of the Less Commonly Taught Languages (NCOALTL).

Ms. Lee was also an essential part of the writing team for the K-4 Chinese curriculum funded by the Ohio State Department of Education’s critical language FLAP grant. She co-chaired the Chinese National Standards Project in 1996-1998, participated in the NEH/Ohio State NLERC-funded Guide for Basic Chinese Language Programs in 1999, and co-authored the CLASS Professional Standards for K-12 Chinese Language Teachers in 2007.

Ms. Lee’s experience is truly international. Before moving to the US in 1984, she taught for three years at an international pre-school in Hong Kong. She continues to assist in overseas programs for Chinese teachers and has worked with the Beijing Language and Culture University and Hanban in providing courses for teachers. Ms. Lee has received many honors and awards including the FLENJ Professional Award, CLASS Professional Service Award, and A+ For Kids Teacher Award. Ms. Lee is honored to be recognized as the 2012 NICFTL Teacher of the Year. She dedicates this award to all of the other hard-working language teachers in the NECTFL family.

The Northeast Conference Program has always been a ‘breeding ground’ for leaders — many of our conference chairs have moved on to presidencies of other organizations such as ACTFL, NCSSFL, NNEFL, and NADSFL — and the SANS. Inc./Mead Program, named for Robert G. Mead of Connecticut and sponsored by SANS, Inc., Exclusive Licensor of Sony Language Learning Systems, allows us to commit ourselves to sustaining engagement with future leaders. Leadership is needed at the school or college, district, community, state, regional, national, and international levels. SANS, Inc./Mead Fellows are selected in part for the quality of project they propose, and the plan of action for that project is developed by the Fellow and his/her assigned mentor, with input from others, including state association leaders, as required. The Northeast Conference expresses its deep gratitude to our state associations for the dedication and insights they bring to the task of selecting candidates for this important program. We are immensely grateful to Stella Derum and SANS, Inc., Exclusive Licensor of Sony Language Learning Systems for financial support without which this program would not be possible.

Congratulations to this year’s Fellows and best wishes to them as they embark on their leadership projects!

ACTFL ORAL PROFICIENCY INTERVIEW (OPI) FAMILIARIZATION WORKSHOP

ACTFL teams up with NECTFL to offer ACTFL’s OPI Familiarization Workshop. This is an introduction to the ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines, the ACTFL Rating Scale, and the ACTFL OPI. You will be able to view demonstration interviews and discuss the implications of the ACTFL Proficiency Scale and the OPI for establishing program goals, and for planning curriculum, instruction, and assessment. ACTFL’s OPI is the most widely used method in the U.S. for measuring speaking proficiency in a language. You will leave with a valuable foundation in second language assessment, curriculum design, and instruction. After attending this workshop, you will be better equipped to determine the speaking abilities of your students and able to use effective questioning strategies that promote oral proficiency. This workshop is of special interest to all world language teachers, especially those wishing to acquire professional development or to pursue further OPI Assessment training or OPI tester certification. All OPI Familiarization Workshop attendees MUST also be registered for the NECTFL conference.

FRIDAY, APRIL 20
2:00 – 5:00 P.M.

#1 Advocacy Toolbox for the Language Educator
Joanne O’Toole, SUNY Oswego

This workshop is intended to increase participants’ awareness of the many purposes of language advocacy and multiple approaches for enacting it. Participants will engage in a variety of activities to support their development of a language advocacy “toolbox,” a set of resources that can be drawn on to proactively and reactively advocate for language education. In English and of interest to teachers of all languages at all levels of instruction.

#2 Using Class Observations as an Effective Professional Development Tool
Grazyna Dudney, Defense Language Institute FL Center

Class observations are often viewed as a painful requirement associated with high degrees of ambiguity, discomfort, and anxiety on the part of the observer and the observed teacher. Developing class observation skills and related communication strategies can transform class observations into a valuable professional development tool. In this workshop, participants experience a simulation of a class observation & feedback cycle. They analyze class observation etiquette and practice negotiating an observation “focus,” using data gathering instruments, giving feedback, and developing post observation action plans leading to long-term professional development. No background knowledge required. In English with examples in English and of particular interest to adult/professional educators.

#3 Social Justice in the WL Classroom
Maryann Woods-Murphy, Northern Highlands NJ Regional HS

Workshop by 2010 NECTFL and NJ Teacher of the Year. Language learning springs from a rich and deep context, but how do we communicate this to our students? How do we help our students to care about the world and want to know more about it? Let’s help our students dig deeper into the stories of culture that will help them to take on new perspectives. How can we both teach the proficiency building skills that we need to focus on, while remembering why it’s important to understand the world’s language comes from? This workshop is for language teachers who want to open their students’ minds to a more diverse world. As language educators, we teach cultural competencies which will serve our students in life and in the work place. How might we expand the reach of language programs to position language educators as leaders in the area of global awareness and diversity? This workshop will present a variety of examples of how this might be done and will ask participants to reflect on their individual contexts to create a global awareness action plan for their school community. This workshop will be presented in English and should be of interest to teachers of all languages at all levels of instruction.

#5 Embracing the Common Core Curriculum
Bill Heller, SUNY College at Geneseo

After an orientation to the Common Core Curriculum for English Language Arts (ELA), workshop participants will consider how to use the five “claims” in the ELA Common Core as a lens by which to examine the standards-based World Language curriculum and to refine and enhance the best practices that teachers are already using with their students. Time will be given for brainstorming and sharing ideas and approaches. No previous background is required. The first part of the workshop will give enough of an introduction to the Common Core so that participants who have never even heard of it will be able to follow along well. In English with examples in Spanish and of special interest to secondary school educators.

#10 Game-ifying Your Courses as a Method for Maintaining Motivation
Stayc Dubravac, University of Kentucky

Teachers may often have difficulty motivating students on the 5th C: Community. Online gaming, however, has been around long enough to have established practices that encourage communities surrounding online games such as World of Warcraft. These research-based gaming principles are increasingly being incorporated in business and military training to improve performance, increase engagement, and maintain motivation; and education can also benefit. This workshop presents the principles driving the formation of the communities and helps participants identify how to incorporate these mechanics into their course design to promote participation in the language community in the classroom and beyond. No significant background knowledge is needed. Participants should come with clearly identified, written objectives, classroom practices, and issues that they want to improve or implement. In English with examples in French, Latin and Spanish, and of interest to all.

#11 Digital Storytelling Tools to Encourage Writing & Conversation in World Languages
Craig Kapp, New York University
Tulia Jimenez-Vergara, The College of New Jersey

Digital storytelling has become an increasingly popular vehicle for student expression, and during this hands-on workshop we will explore new and emerging interfaces and technologies that can be easily integrated into a classroom setting. In particular, we will discuss an exciting new technology called “Augmented Reality,” which allows virtual content to be seamlessly blended with a “real world” environment, usually through the use of a mobile device or multimedia enhanced desktop computer. In this workshop, participants will be exposed to a wide range of rich media storytelling tools, including QR codes, immersive video and images, and ZooBurst, a web-based multimedia-collaging tool that lets students easily create their own 3D pop-up books. Participants will experience these tools first-hand, and will learn how these software packages can be used to enhance student participation, improve oral proficiency, and foster a deeper connection with course content. In addition, participants who own an iPhone or iPad are encouraged to bring them to the workshop, as we will be building “mobile storytelling” experiences that connect the “real world” to virtual content using simple drag and drop interfaces. No particular background knowledge is required. In English with examples in Arabic, Chinese and Spanish, and of special interest to postsecondary educators.

#12 Yours, Mine & Ours: 21st Century Professional Communities for All

Barbara Lindsey, University of Connecticut

How can we best use 21st century technologies to support our ongoing professional development as individuals and as members of a larger community of practice? Participants in this workshop will explore and evaluate examples of online collaborative environments and gain practical experience in using web-based technologies to revitalize local professional communities, strengthen existing collegial connections and forge new professional relationships. Participants will have access to all workshop resources and are welcome to continue collaboration with each other in an online community we build together. The ability to use a computer keyboard and mouse and to navigate the internet via web browsers is required. In English and of interest to all world language educators.

#13 Visit to Walters Art Museum Roman and Greek Collections and Peabody Library Rare Manuscripts Collection

Jason Slanga, Baltimore County Public Schools (facilitator)
Rebecca Sinel, Walters Art Museum (docent)

This workshop for classical language teachers will include docent-guided visits of the Greek and Roman galleries at the Walters Art Museum and of the nearby Sheridan and George Peabody libraries of the Johns Hopkins University. The library tours will be of the Latin literature collection from antiquity to modernity and of the Rare Book Room at the Peabody. The tours’ focus will be on the transition from a predominantly manuscript culture to the print revolution and on the social and political issues that emerged with the advent of the printing press. Latin’s continued predominance in manuscripts and printing, well after the classical period, will be highlighted. In English with examples in Latin and of interest to all. Transportation from the Marriott Waterfront to the museum and library and back will be provided.

#14 Arts Integration Onsite at the Walters Art Museum

Patricia Klos, Anne Arundel County (MD) Public Schools
Amanda Kodek, Walters Art Museum

Join us for an afternoon at The Walters Art Museum in Baltimore to discover great works of art from around the world. Learn about ways to integrate the art into your classroom instruction with Artful Thinking routines while on docent-led tours of the museum’s collection. Focused tours for Spanish (in Spanish), French (in French), Chinese (in English) and Arabic (in English) art will be offered. An introduction to the on-line teacher resources offered by the museum will also be included. Note: this workshop can be taken in conjunction with the Arts Integration workshop offered on Saturday or can stand alone. In English, French, or Spanish and of special interest to secondary school educators. Transportation from the Marriott Waterfront Hotel to the museum and back provided.

SATURDAY, APRIL 21

9:00 A.M. – 12:00 NOON

#15 Active Learning Strategies for the Latin Classroom

Jacqueline Carlon, UMass Boston

In this workshop, participants will work in groups with commonly used textbooks (preferably their own) to create materials for the Latin classroom that use speaking and writing to teach and reinforce students’ knowledge of vocabulary and syntax. These techniques include pair and group work and such strategies as composition (as opposed to translation), recasting, written response,
